Hitler Appoints Civilian Defense Council; Poles Reject His Terms, Call More Men

Roosevelt Sees Hope of Peace As He Receives Lothian as Envoy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer.

President Roosevelt yesterday voiced hope that constructive international efforts might "obviate the folly of war" in a warm exchange of greetings with Britain's new Ambassador, Lord Lothian.

In an audience of unprecedented length, the President accepted the Ambassador's credentials and declared Great Britain and America were devoted to the same search "for permanent peace and an end of the fear of aggression."

The President condemned war and held up the pursuit of peace as the prime task of "international statesmanship." He cordially acknowledged the Marquess of Lothian's declaration of similar aims and the Ambassador's assertion that "nothing that can arise is likely to disturb" good will and understanding between the British and American peoples.

Cable From Italy's King

While the two exchanged greetings in a 90-minute interview, King Victor Emmanuel of Italy cabled the President that "there has been done and there is being done by us whatever is possible to bring about a peace with justice."

Emmanuel's message was in reply to the President's first urgent appeal to Italy's King to bring Italian influence to bear on Fuehrer Hitler against the outbreak of a general European war.

No reply has yet been received to Roosevelt's two appeals to Hitler to agree to settlement by direct negotiation or conciliation, although Poland promptly accepted.

King Expresses Thanks

"I am grateful to you for your interest," wrote Italy's King. "I have immediately transferred your message to my government."

The King said Italy's efforts in the present situation were "known to all."

Ambassador Lothian called early in the day on Secretary of State Hull. The presentation at the White House completed what was said to be the swiftest accrediting of an ambassador on record here. As he left the State Department, he said the European situation "appears a little brighter."

However, a reaction from Tuesday's optimism appeared in some Government quarters. One official remarked that the "cleavage" of last week appeared unchanged. Another said that apparent reaction among the German people in favor of peace might force Hitler to an aggressive move to maintain his position. This official said it was encouraging that Hitler, for the first time in a crisis, has been willing to exchange notes.

French Envoy Sees Welles

While Secretary Hull received Lord Lothian at the State Department, the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin conferred with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

Hull said yesterday afternoon that the State Department knew the general nature of Hitler's reply to Britain, but the Department could not disclose it.

Asked if he thought there was "improvement" in the European

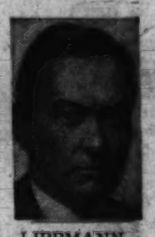
Russian Pact Reveals Change in Strategy Of Hitler After Revival of Anglo-French Power Made Italy a Liability, Japan Useless

By Walter Lippmann.

WHEN HITLER sent Ribbentrop to Moscow, he scrapped something much more important than the anti-Communist and anti-Russian pages of "Mein Kampf." He scrapped the strategical plan with which he has hitherto won his diplomatic victories. The Soviet agreement is a decisive point in his career in that from now on, if there is a war, he must fight a radically different war than he had planned to fight, if there is a continuation of the armed diplomatic struggle his tactics will have to be radically revised.



LIPPMANN

For whatever the immediate outcome, whether it be a European war or the white war of pressure and intimidation and propaganda, the great fact is that in August, 1939, Hitler was forced to abandon his older allies and seek a new ally in Russia. If we can understand the reasons which compelled him to alter his whole plan of action we shall have, I believe, the main strategical clew to the immediate future, to the war if there is a war, or to the diplomatic struggle which is the only alternative to war.

Until the month of August the main instrument of Hitler's foreign policy has been the anti-Comintern pact which provided for common action by Germany, Italy and Japan, with various small states, such as Franco's Spain and Hungary, as junior partners. Ostensibly this pact was aimed at Soviet Russia, but not in reality, as shown by the acts of Germany, Italy and Japan. The purpose of the coalition was to keep Russia neutralized and isolated while the three partners undermined the position of Great Britain and France in Europe, in the Mediterranean, in northern Africa and the Near East, in China and the far Pacific.

Denounced But Never Attacked Russia

THE ANTI-COMINTERN partners denounced Russia. But, except for sporadic frontier fighting by the Japanese in Asia, they never attacked Russia; on the other hand, their every important move since 1936 has been directed against the outposts of the Anglo-French power in the world. From 1936 until after Munich in 1938 the campaign was brilliantly

British Refuse In New Note to Put Pressure Upon Poland

By Ralph W. Barnes.
Special Cable to The Post

London (Thursday), Aug. 31. Fuehrer Hitler has failed in an attempt to persuade London to urge Warsaw to send to Berlin emissaries with full plenipotentiary powers to liquidate the Polish-German dispute through agreeing outright to German annexation of Danzig and the Polish Corridor.

Maintaining the view that Berlin talks of this sort would amount to "negotiation under duress," the British government turned down the proposal in a courteous but clearly-worded note dispatched to the Fuehrer through regular diplomatic channels last night. The message is understood to leave the door open for further diplomatic exchanges, and a reply is expected.

[Diplomatic circles in London said the exchange of notes thus far had failed to produce anything approaching a solution, according to the Associated Press. Sources close to the British government said the situation was unchanged since receipt of Hitler's original note Saturday.—Editor's note.]

Note Outlined Plan

Hitler outlined his Berlin conference plan in the note which was studied by Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax in the small hours yesterday morning.

In its response, the British government said that while it could not see its way clear to urge the Poles to accept the proposals in the Berlin message, it was presenting the subject to Warsaw as a matter of information.

Thus ended barring unforeseen developments—the efforts of the Fuehrer to entice Polish statesmen into his parlor as he brought Kurt Schuschnigg, Austria's chancellor, to Berchtesgaden, and Emil Hacha, President of Czecho-Slovakia, to Berlin. Those visits hastened the end, respectively, of Austria and Czecho-Slovakia.

Repeatedly, the British government has made it clear that it has no intention of aiding the Fuehrer in employing similar tactics at this time.

As for the Poles, they made it quite clear yesterday that no special Polish emissaries would be traveling to Berlin. It was enough, they said, to have the full-fledged embassy with its staff in that city.

Ominous News From Danzig

What Warsaw did do yesterday was to order to the colors several more classes of reserves, thus bringing the Polish war machine close to full mobilization. A spokesman at the Polish embassy here placed emphasis on the complete military oc-

Warsaw Says 'Aggressive' Turn by Nazis Imperils State

By Elmer Peterson,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Warsaw, Aug. 30.—Poland ordered a large scale "partial mobilization" tonight simultaneously with receipt of reports to the foreign office that Adolf Hitler's reply to British proposals for ending the European crisis offered no immediate settlement.

A foreign office spokesman asserted that the Fuehrer's note was "even more bitter" than his reply to French Premier Daladier last Sunday.

The communication to Daladier was interpreted by the French premier as a point blank refusal to negotiate directly with Poland on Nazi demands for Danzig and Pomorze, the Polish Corridor.

[The United Press reported from Paris that the Polish government was understood to have advised Britain and France that none of Hitler's latest demands is acceptable and that the Warsaw government refuses to consider them.—Editor's note.]

To Arm Over 2,000,000

The near-general mobilization order, it was estimated, would bring to well over 2,000,000 the number of men under arms. No official figures were given, however. The present total is close to 1,500,000.

Although pink mobilization posters appeared on walls with the large heading, "The President has ordered general mobilization," a communique described the action as enactment of "additional military measures" and informed persons asserted that a number of exceptions were involved.

The order also provided for the wide-scale requisitioning of motorcars, trucks, horses, carts, bicycles and other means of transportation.

All Under 40 Called

All reserve officers, noncommissioned officers, and soldiers under 40 must report to their nearest military center.

It was taken for granted here that the mobilization was ordered with the full knowledge of Britain.

[The mobilization measure, according to The Post's special correspondent, was received by a silent population, apparently fully conscious of the danger and the responsibilities facing it. Warsaw remained quiet, except for a short period of excitement when the mobilization posters came out.

[To Poles the issue of war or peace seemed settled today. The ray of hope that war could still be avoided lingers in all hearts, of course, though it is now very faint. Everybody is definitely prepared for war. Yet people do not talk about war, but await the fatal day with

Goering Heads 6-Man Board To Unify Rule If War Comes

By Louis P. Lochner,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin (Thursday), Aug. 31.—Adolf Hitler decided late last night to concentrate in a few hands all the economic, financial and administrative power necessary for defending the Reich in case the supreme call should come.

A short time before Great Britain's latest secret crisis note was handed in at the Reich's Chancellery, the Fuehrer appointed a ministerial council of six men, headed by General Field Marshal Hermann Goering, his most trusted adviser. The others:

Minister of the Interior William Frick as head of the nation's administrative apparatus.

Col. Gen. Wilhelm Keitel as chief of the high command of the armed forces.

Dr. Walther Funk as president of the Reichsbank and minister of economics.

Rudolf Hess as deputy Fuehrer of the Nazi Party.

Dr. Hans-Heinrich Lammers, as liaison between the Fuehrer and the council.

Shortly after this decree was announced, a government spokesman said Albert Forster, Nazi district leader in Danzig and the newly created chief of state there, had arrived in Berlin for what it was assumed was another important conference with Hitler, and possibly for instructions as to his future course toward Poland.

Early Action Forecast

Forster's unexpected arival gave rise to reports that Germany proposed to take positive action in respect to the Free City soon.

Official sources refused to say whether Forster had met Hitler or other government leaders. Officials evne refused to state whether Forster remained in the city.

The decree centralizing defense authority in a six man cabinet council said:

"For the duration of the present foreign political tension I decree for unified leadership in administration and economy as follows:

"1. Out of the Reich's defense council a cabinet council for the Reich defense will be formed as a permanent committee.

"Permanent members of the cabinet council are: General Field Marshal Goering, as chairman, the deputy of the Fuehrer, the general deputy for Reich's administration, the general deputy for economy, the minister and chief of the Reich's Chancellery, the chief of the high command of the army.

"The chairman may also call in additional members of the Reich's defense council as well as other persons for consultation.

2. The cabinet council for the Reich's defense can issue decrees with legal authority in case I do not order the issuance of a law through the Reich's government or the Reichstag.

"3. The authority of the Field Marshal Gen. Goering accruing from the carrying out of the four-year plan of October, 1936, in particular his right to issue orders, remains effective.

"4. The business of the cabinet council for the Reich's defense will be conducted by the Reich's minister and chief of the chancellery.

"5. I will determine the time for the discontinuance of this decree.

"Dated Berlin, August 30, 1939.

"Signed, Adolf Hitler, Der Fuehrer.

Pax Romana Called Example For Diplomats

'A Gracious Omen in A Dark Hour,' Berle Finds Catholic Group

Foreign offices of the world "must humbly endeavor to learn from you," Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Berle last night told 500 students from 38 nations, gathered at Catholic University to launch a crusade of work and prayer for peace.

The eighteenth annual Congress of Pax Romana is "one of the few gracious omens in a dark hour," the State Department official said. Berle made no effort to conceal the gravity of the European crisis in his five-minute speech.

"When the peace of many peoples hangs in the balance and we contemplate the wreckage of war, we must strain to find some stronger force in international relations than the casual grouping of nations or the casual deployment of armies," he declared.

Despite the "slightly cynical atmosphere" enveloping current diplomacy, Berle expressed confidence that force, the threat of force and economic pressure must eventually give way to rule of "the simple commandment, 'Love Thy Neighbor.'".

The official concluded his remarks with a greeting in Spanish to delegates from Latin America.

Also before the evening session of the congress, the Most Rev. Henri-Roger Beaussart, auxiliary bishop of Paris, told his listeners they must be ready to dedicate—even sacrifice—

U. S. Indicts Annenberg as Lottery Backer

Off-Track Betting Target in Fourth Federal Accusation

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 30.—The Government attacked the widespread practice of betting on horse races in gambling rooms today with indictments based on the contention that the system was a lottery.

A Federal grand jury indicted M. L. Annenberg, Philadelphia, publisher and racing news magnate; Charles Bidwill, owner of the Chicago Cardinals professional football team and president of a printing firm; and James M. Ragen, manager of Annenberg's Nation-wide News Service, on charges of conspiracy to further a lottery scheme.

The two indictments alleged the defendants and their companies supplied equipment and information to off-track bookmakers, who were described as "operators of lottery schemes."

The jurors maintained that Bidwill's concern, Bentley, Murray & Co., printed and distributed entry sheets, tickets and other material used in betting establishments away from the race tracks, and that the Nation-wide News Service and a subsidiary, Illinois Nation-wide News Service, aided the "lottery scheme" by sending entries, odds and results over their wire networks from the tracks to the bookmakers' shops.

The defendants were charged with using the mails to further a lottery and with carrying over interstate

Bremen Sails; Nazi Freighter Faces Penalty

U. S. May Seize Bond Of $50,000 Because Boat Skipped Port

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer.

The German liner Bremen and two British ships were given clearance by Federal officials in New York yesterday and sailed for home, but customs authorities moved to claim the $50,000 bond of the German freighter Wiegand, missing since it sailed out of the Delaware River Sunday following a conference between its captain and two mysterious visitors.

Raymond Raff, collector of the port of Philadelphia, said the freighter had violated United States maritime laws by failing to stop at Norfolk, for which clearance papers were issued at Philadelphia. Steps to forfeit the Wiegand's bond were set in motion.

Meanwhile, the Government's continued concern over the European situation was demonstrated by the action of the United States Lines in canceling, on orders from Washington, a scheduled Labor Day cruise of the S. S. Washington to Bermuda so the liner might be available for

Pope Reported Urging a New Roosevelt Plea

Vatican Believes His Appeal Is Most Likely To Result in Peace

By James M. Minifie.
Special Cable to The Post

Rome, Aug. 30.—It is believed in informed Vatican circles that Pope Pius XII sent a personal message to President Roosevelt yesterday, asking him to follow up his two earlier notes to Germany and Poland as the most promising line of attack at the present moment.

The Pope is believed to have expressed his opinion that Poland's acceptance of President Roosevelt's suggestion of direct negotiations with Germany or conciliation proceedings offers the best hope of avoiding war.

The failure of Fuehrer Hitler to reply to either of the President's messages is thought to have discouraged Washington from further action, but the Vatican believes that this approach still holds possibilities of advance.

President Moscicki of Poland has agreed either to direct negotiations or conciliation.

It is believed that the Pope expressed the hope that if conciliation

Thanksgiving Advanced in '40 To Save Calendar Plants Grief

In order to keep 1940 calendars accurate, President Roosevelt, who recently provoked a controversy by advancing Thanksgiving Day this year, yesterday moved up the holiday next year.

Thanksgiving Day in 1940, he proclaimed, will fall on November 21, the third Thursday, instead of on November 28, the fourth Thursday. He has already announced that Thanksgiving Day this year will fall on November 23 instead of on November 30.

The President said the first announcement was prompted by the belief there was insufficient time for shopping between Thanksgiving and Christmas. His charge drew complaints from football coaches, calendar makers, turkey growers and some Governors.

The announcement yesterday for 1940, made in response to queries from calendar makers, is to give everybody plenty of time to revise Thanksgiving plans.

Meanwhile, a check-up revealed that ten Governors indorsed the Thanksgiving Day change in 1940. Fourteen who were for the change this year did not disclose their 1940 preference, and 15 were against any change.

Several Governors said it was "too early to think of 1940."

Propagandists 'Hospitable' To U. S.-Berlin Broadcaster

Americans listening last night to the N. B. C. broadcast of H. R. Baukhage from Berlin, which was cut off in the midst of his praise for what Adolf Hitler's propaganda staff had done for him, wondered if that staff hadn't muzzled the speaker, one way—or another.

N. B. C. officials said simply that Baukhage's time had expired; his predecessor had "used up too much time telling about sandbags in London."

"Tension," said Baukhage, "has grown so great that it can grow no greater. Something will snap if it does."

"And right here," he said, "I would like to try to give you some idea of what it means to the people. Here I am, a guest in a foreign land, a land far away from the possibilities of an air attack at night or any immediate horror of war.

"It is very much as if I were in the office of a man whose whole future was suddenly at stake; still he is kind and courteous to me.

"He offers his hospitality to me. He lets me use his typewriter, and now he pushes his busy telephone across the desk, to let me talk to you, right before him."

Just then his broadcast was cut off.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

When the President returned from his last holiday and into the Washington subvortex of the crisis, he looked like a tourist. His suit was wrinkled, he seemed harassed and troubled, he was as nearly disheveled as he ever gets, informal dresser though he is.

Gen. Pershing. . . . inside tip

But next morning, after a strenuous 24 hours of intercession for peace, he was himself again. He had on a freshly-laundered seersucker suit and his salt-water sunburn, with some of the lines of care ironed out a bit, restored him to his usual sanguine, healthy self.

SPIES WITH TRAYS: American tourists who returned from Germany on the last voyage of the United States Liner Manhattan (Gen. Pershing was a fellow passenger) are agog about the discovery that the star waiter in the dining salon was left at Hamburg under the suspicion that he is a German spy.

"—at the Captain's table"

He had been one of the waiters at Capt. Randall's own table, where the celebrities and bigshots sit, eat and talk at every crossing.

A vigilant ship's officer became suspicious—Hans was much too intelligent and worldly for a steward—and had him trailed in Hamburg.

* * * *

The trail led directly to the Gestapo offices, the Nazi secret police. Apparently Hans' suspicion also was aroused, because he did not return to the ship. (Probably some one was trailing the trailers.)

When the ship's officers reported his disappearance to the Hamburg police, they were told that Hans "had been arrested for smuggling German marks into Germany."

"—will Mussolini bat third?"

When Gen. Pershing was in Paris, quite a few generals called on him to pay their respects, including several Italian generals . . . Though it will obviously be denied, it is reliably reported that they told Pershing that Mussolini would have some difficulty inducing the Italians to fight for Hitler—even if Mussolini wanted to.

Poison Gases To Be Deadlier In Next War

'Its Use Now Has to Be Assumed,' Says Army Scientist

By G. B. Lal

International News Service Science Editor

New York, Aug. 30.—Deadlier volumes of poison gases will be among the new products of chemical science against which both soldiers and civilians will have to guard themselves if war breaks out in Europe.

According to Capt. C. W. Glover, British authority actively engaged in organization of the air defense of London, no less than 300,000 chemical compounds have been tested. Out of these a dozen or more are distinctly on the list of available poison gases.

"Its Use Must Be Assumed"

Dr. V. R. Kokatnur, captain in the chemical warfare division of the United States Reserve Corps and head of an industrial chemical laboratory in New York, recalled the poison gas situation in the last war and the later developments. He summed up as follows:

"Gas warfare is effective in its own way. Its use in any war now has to be assumed. Most of the possible types of organic compounds with small molecules, suitable for poison gas purposes, have already been made. Attention need not be given so much to new gases, as to the larger use of what are already known and can be produced abundantly.

"Mustard gas, which consists of carbon, hydrogen, chlorine, sulphur, is one of the most dreadful substances. It belongs to the type known as vesicants.

Blister the Body

"These gases cause severe burns and blisters on the body. A soldier thus injured has to be cared for by several attendants. He is unable to fight and ties up plenty of other people needed for war services.

"Lewisite, consisting of arsenic, acetylene, chlorine, chemically related to certain forms of plastics and resins, such as artificial rubber and silk, is like mustard gas and even more harmful.

"Diphenylchlorarsine, the sneezing and toxic smoke gas, produces irritation so that a person wants to take his gas mask off. Then such a gas as phosgene, consisting of one atom of carbon and oxygen and two of chlorine, is deadly if inhaled.

Blinding for Long Time

"When the sneezing gas and phosgene are released together many deaths can result.

"Chloracetophenone and bromobemzylcyanid ar xampls of cass that cause irritation of the eyes. Tears flow and the person is unable to see for a long time.

"Poison gases can be released out of containers of various sorts. They may be hurled in shells, but particularly interesting is the new suggestion that liquid poison gases be dropped in bombs shaped like flasks. As these bombs fall from the airplanes they turn into deadly vapors."

Bacteriological Possibilities

The possibility of spreading disease germs by bombs is not great. Dr. J. B. S. Haldane, noted English scientist, regards that a negligible danger, at least in the earlier stages of the war.

But Dr. P. A. Gorer, another authority, says, "It would be very rash to imagine that the use of bacteria (disease germs) is impossible."

Special strains of germs might be developed to which the belligerent employing the mis rendered immune by vaccination. Vaccines against the new germs, would, of course, be prepared secretly. The soldiers or civilians attacked with the germs would thus be at the mercy of an invisible epidenmic.

Americans Held Aboard German Ship in U. S. Port

Everett, Wash., Aug. 30 (AP).—Virtually "interned" in their own country, a score of American passengers aboard the German motorship Portland scanned newspaper headlines, sipped Munich beer and pondered their plight today.

In view of the European crisis, the Seattle customs agents ordered Capt. Franz Harder to hold the vessel in port here, instead of proceeding to Vancouver, B. C., from San Francisco.

The situation arises because the law prohibits foreign vessels from carrying American passengers directly from one American port to another and landing them there. The Portland moved here from Port Gamble, a Puget Sound port.

Corson & Gruman Low Bidders for C. & O. Canal Job

National Park Service announced yesterday that Corson & Gruman Co., of Washington, was low bidder on reconstruction work on the C. & O. Canal at Widewater, Md., part of the Federal Government's move to restore and beautify the historic waterway. The bid was $94,793.

Work will be started in about three weeks, according to Frank T. Gartside, acting superintendent of National Capital Parks.

The contract calls for repair of the canal sidewall between Cropley, Md., and Great Falls, a section badly damaged by floods.

Black Cat Looks at King's Ambassador, Gets Picture Taken and Is Named 'Crisis'

Beast on Lothian's Shoulder Looks Just Like 'Appeasement'

By Edward T. Folliard

Lord Lothian, the new British Ambassador, posed on the White House steps yesterday with a black alley cat on his shoulder, thereby giving news photographers the biggest thrill they had experienced since J. Pierpont Morgan bounced a circus midget on his knee at the Capitol.

The amiable envoy regarded the incident as a good omen.

The cat, a double for "Appeasement," the black feline that prowls in front of No. 10 Downing street, appeared mysteriously in front of the White House Executive Office shortly after Lord Lothian arrived to present his credentials to President Roosevelt.

In view of the tense atmosphere there and across the street at the State Department, the cat was promptly named "Crisis." It was now ready to achieve a lightning-like fame, such as no Maltese, Persian or other blue-blood ever achieved.

Crisis On His Shoulder

Living in a republic, Crisis could not very well hope to look at a King, but it did look at and feel the embrace of His Majesty's Ambassador to the United States, the Most Honorable the Marquess of Lothian, C. H. (Companion of Honor).

Lord Lothian, emerging from the White House after a long talk with President Roosevelt, was asked to pose with Crisis. He readily agreed, and the photographic bombardment began. At first, the Marquess held the alley stray on his chest, then he placed it on his shoulder.

"How about black cats being bad luck," somebody yelled at him.

"Oh, no, they're good luck," said the Ambassador.

"Well, will it bring peace or war?"

Envoy Expects Peace

"Peace, undoubtedly," said the Ambassador, stroking Crisis' tail.

"If Sir Ronald Lindsay could only see you now!" exclaimed a newsreel man.

Lord Lothian is not expected to spend a great deal of his time in the future posing with alley cats, any more than Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy kept on making holes-in-one at Stoke-Poges. Nevertheless that incident, taken with some others, was believed to herald a new order of things at the British Embassy, long regarded as a citadel of rigid correctness.

Lord Lothian, a 57-year-old bachelor, is unlike any British Ambassador within memory, which is probably the reason he was sent over in these critical times. He is not a career diplomat. He calls himself a "free lance," and is always warning himself that he is going to talk himself into trouble. He probably won't, but in any case he is going to talk when he feels like it. He said at the White House that he would be in a mood to talk to newspapermen at the Embassy this afternoon.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, who came to Washington in 1930, did not hold a press conference until just before the arrival of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Pin-strip Suit, Tan Hat

There was a time when new envoys, calling at the White House to present their credentials, arrived in top hats or diplomatic regalia and were ushered into the Blue Room. President Roosevelt has done away with such formality, and receives in his office.

Lord Lothian arrived at the White House in the same dark, pin-stripe suit he wore on his arrival the day before. He also wore the same tie, and the same tan fedora.

President Roosevelt talked to him for an hour and a half, which is believed to have established some kind of a record.

"Crisis" will bring good luck. So said the new British Ambassador, Lord Lothian yesterday as he stood at the White House stroking the black alley cat that appeared mysteriously at the Executive Mansion shortly after the new envoy arrived to present his credentials. It's a double for Downing Street's "Appeasement," and was promptly named "Crisis"

Bilbo-Backed Johnson 22,000 Votes Ahead in Mississippi Democratic Primary

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 30 (AP).—Paul Burney Johnson, backed by Senator Theodore G. Bilbo in a political feud with Washington ram i fications, held a plurality of more than 25,000 vote plurality over Martin Sennett Conner for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Mississippi.

JOHNSON

Senator Pat Harrison supported Conner, a former Governor, in a primary election run-off yesterday Democratic nomination is tantamount to election.

Returns from 1,643 precincts out of 1,660 gave Johnson 158,984 and Conner 133,734.

Conner's apparent defeat puts the Bilbo-Johnson forces in power in 1940, when Mississippi will send 18 delegates to the National Democratic Convention. Bilbo is an outspoken advocate of a third term for President Roosevelt.

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 30 (AP). The West Virginia CIO convention today adopted unanimously a resolution indorsing a third term for President Roosevelt.

John B. Easton, unopposed for re-election as president of the West Virginia Industrial Union Council, shouted to the convention, "That's our answer to the enemies of President Roosevelt."

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 30 (AP).—Two Pennsylvania Republican leaders today warned members of their party that this year's elections would have an important bearing on 1940.

Young Republican Chairman Frank C. Hilton asserted that the municipal elections were the seeds for the State and national campaign next year.

Chairman Albert E. Moses, of Mercer County, said "we either carry Pennsylvania for our selections this year or we fail in 1940."

Policyholders Take Little Part In Elections

William Van Nalts, secretary of the Prudential Insurance Co., testified yesterday that only a small percentage of its more than 20,000,000 policyholders voted in the annual election of directors and most of these acted through proxies obtained by company agents.

He told the National Monopoly subcommittee white and green proxies were sent to agents each year to be distributed. The white proxies contained the names of the director's slate of candidates while the green ones contained blank spaces for "any opposition directors."

Van Nalts said agents for the SEC had checked signatures of 110 of these proxies with signatures on policies and found a number did not correspond. He said company executives did not know the reason for this and were taking precautions.

Charges Contempt Of Consent Decree Issued 9 Years Ago

By the Associated Press

The Justice Department announced yesterday that criminal contempt proceedings based on activities purported to be in violation of a 1930 consent decree were filed in the Southern California Federal Court against 13 motion picture companies and 54 individual officers and employes.

The companies were Fox West Coast Theaters Corporation, Fox West Coast Agency Corporation, Fox West Coast Service Corporation, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Loew's Inc., Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, Paramount Pictures, Inc., RKO-Radio Pictures, Inc., RKO Distributing Corporation, Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Vitagraph, Inc., and United Artists Corporation.

The department said that in 1930 it filed an equity suit against the Fox West Coast Theaters organization and certain major picture distributors alleging a conspiracy to restrain and monopolize trade in motion pictures.

The complaint alleged the distributors were granting preferences to Fox West Coast theaters over its independent competitors, and the companies consented to a decree which prohibited the practices. Investigation of complaints in recent years, the department said, developed "considerable evidence" that seven major distributors had given certain preferences to Fox West Coast Theaters Corporation.

Navy Weighs Commissioning of Aviation Cadets

Expansion of the Navy flying service by commissioning aviation cadets who have had four years of college training is under consideration by the Navy Department, it was learned yesterday.

The proposal is being studied in an effort to provide enough pilots to fill the Navy's needs when its minimum of 3,000 first-line planes is reached.

If the plan is carried into effect, officials said, the aviation cadets would be appointed ensigns and sent to the Naval Academy for a year's post-graduate work. Their subsequent promotion to higher rank would be based on the present selective system of advancement already used for promotion of regular officers.

Bufano Seeks Safe (and Public) Site Here for His Statue 'Peace'

Designer of Buffalo Nickel Arrives to Consult U. S. Officials; Latest Masterpiece Weighs 12 Tons and Is 25 Feet High

If the fates, Hitler and other mysterious forces permit, Ben Dufano, the stocky little sculptor who designed the buffalo nicket, would like to find a spit for his latest contribution to the arts—"Peace"—before war breaks out.

BUFANO

Christened Biniamino, although he prefers just plain Ben, Bufano arrived here yesterday to consult Government officials on possibilities of erecting his newest masterpiece in Washington.

Fashioned in California black granite and stainless steel, the 12-ton statue forms a giant projectile 25-feet high.

The bushy-haired modernist said yesterday at the Willard that he would first like to see "Peace" exhibited at the Goldent Gate Exposition in San Francisco Bay—he is from San Francisco—and then he would like to have it ensconced in a safe (and very public) place for all to see.

An earlier offering by Bufano—statue of St. Francis—drew fire from Pegler with the observation it "added a monumental God-awful to the terrible total of American statuary." Pegler offered to forfeit $100 if he couldn't hew a better statue with a bung starter and carpenter's chisel.

Bufano also posted $100 and Pegler matched St. Francis—admitting at the same time it "wasn't much prettier than Bufano's work."

Aviation Exports Up 35 Per Cent

Aeronautics exports in July totaled $9,039,122, the Department of Commerce announced yesterday. They consisted of:

One seaplane, $215,000; 121 land planes, $5,390,220; parachutes and parts, $52,201; engine parts and accessories, $1,050,477; instruments and parts, $164,103, and other parts and accessories, $977,356. Total exports of aeronautic equipment for the first seven months of this year aggregated $58,049,775, an increase of 35 per cent over that period in 1938.

U. S. Action Expected in Gravel Strike

Carmody Assails Smoot for Failure To Settle Dispute

Long-delayed action to end the Smooth Sand & Gravel Co. strike was again deferred yesterday, when John R. Steelman, Labor Department conciliator, announced further progress awaited anticipated developments today.

He indicated both company and union representatives would be called for a joint conference and the Federal Government, with $54,000,000 worth of construction work tied up, would take a strong stand against prolonging the deadlock. He declined to comment on the type of action anticipated.

Although not mentioning him by name, John M. Carmody, Federal Works administrator, yesterday held L. E. Smoot, chairman of the board of directors of the gravel company, responsible for failure to settle the dispute. Smoot, according to union spokesmen, has refused to designate an authorized representative to deal with them. He is ill at his home near Colonial Beach.

Carmody Assails Tie-up

"If there were a war," said Carmody, "it would be intolerable to think that any one person could delay construction of buildings authorized by Congress and badly needed for current Government business."

Efforts to communicate with Smoot were fruitless and company officials here refused to comment.

In contrast to Washington's strike-bound building projects, John P. Coyne, president of the building and construction trades department, A. F. of L., yesterday told the Rotary Club that a recent management-labor agreement to eliminate jurisdictional strikes in the building trades already has released more than $100,000,000 in new construction throughout the country.

He added, however, that a Congress of Industrial Organizations drive in the building trades "threatens to muddy industrial waters."

The Labor Department yesterday took steps to forestall a threatened walkout of Western Union Telegraph employes by assigning a conciliator to arrange a company-union parley. Increased wages and shorter hours are the principal issues.

A conference with Conciliator Howard T. Colvin is scheduled this morning by 300 striking plumbers. It was predicted, however, their dispute would not be settled until after the gravel controversy has been straightened out.

The man was described as 5 feet 9 inches, weighing about 175 pounds, about 50 years of age. He was dressed in a dark blue suit, blue shirt and orange plaid necktie. French Army Takes Over All Railroads

Parisians Get Fourth Warning to Evacuate; Children Leaving

By the Associated Press

Paris, Aug. 30.—The government tonight ordered all railroads turned over to the army as France put the finishing touches on its preparations for war while awaiting the outcome of the German-British negotiations for peace.

The decree, which took effect at once, meant that all civilian passenger and commercial traffic will be either suspended or "curtailed" to meet the army's needs for transportation of troops, guns and supplies.

In further preparation for possible war Gen. Maxime Weygand, 72-year-old World War hero and former commander in chief of the army, arrived in French-mandated Syria during the day and was reported in military circles to have been chosen to be commander of the allied French, British and Turkish forces in the Near East if war should come.

Parisans Warned to Leave

Gen. Weygand flew from Paris, where for the past three days he had consulted with President Lebrun, Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet as well as the army general staff.

The railway requisition rule was understood to have been decided by the government this morning. Sources close to the government claimed that it was not to be considered by itself as meaning that the international situation had taken a turn for the worse.

The orders closely followed, however, the government's fourth urgent warning to all civilian residents of Paris to leave the city.

The fourth evacuation warning still referred to "unhampered communications" and said its purpose was to prevent "unjustified protests" by travelers who failed to leave while transportation was still available.

Children Begin Leaving

At the time the requisition went into effect, it was estimated that less than one-third of the capital's 8,000,000 inhabitants had left.

School children who began leaving the capital today by a series of special trains assembled in classes and were taken by their teachers to designated places of safety in the country. Nearly 50,000 were expected to be evacuated.

There seemed to be a feeling of cautious optimism in French diplomatic circles tonight based on the terms of Germany's reply to London. This optimism was not sufficiently strong, however, to prevent France from taking new steps to put the country in final readiness.

Only a few key officials knew the terms of the British and German notes. Virtually everyone with even semiofficial connections had his own version of the negotiations.

Official quarters said the government had approved the note the British government sent Hitler today.

Danger Worsens, Says Press

Paris, Thursday, Aug. 31.—This morning's Paris newspapers believed the threat of war is "greater than ever," having increased during the past 24 hours.

L'Oeuvre headlined: "Danger! The tide of the crisis has not yet turned."

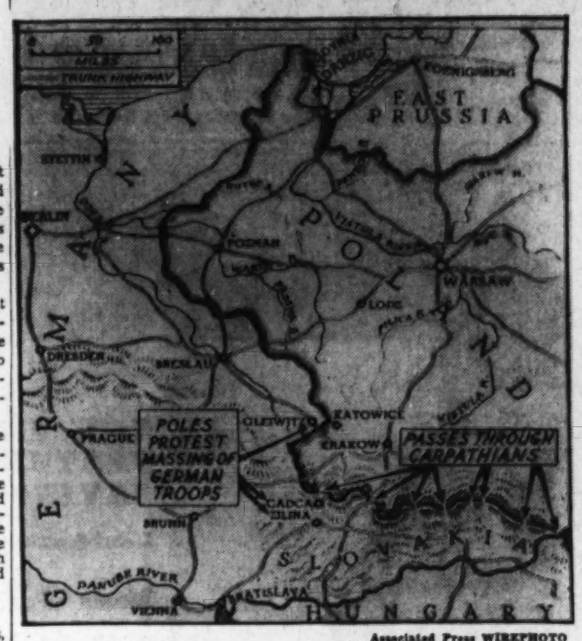
Editorial writers saw Adolf Hitler "more intransigeant than ever" and said that all attempts to bring about direct negotiations between Germany and Poland had failed.

Only ray of hope seen was in the possible mediation efforts by Vatican officials and emphasis was placed on the "unusual diplomatic cativity of agents of the Holy See."

'Make Peace Work' Here, Says Marsh

America's greatest service to the world, in event of European war, would be to remain neutral and "make peace work" here, Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Lobby, asserted yesterday.

Polish Rejection of Nazi Terms Reported Delivered to Allies



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Map shows Slovakian area into which German troops have infiltrated, with headquarters for various detachments at points shown. Such a move would place German legions at the mouth of gateways leading through the Tatra range of the Carpathians into southern Poland calm and grim determination.

[Technically, the measure is less important than have been the previous calls to the colors, but the general mobilization decree has naturally a strong psychological effect.

[It seems indeed that the Polish government has decreed this mobilization in order to impress its own people. Up to today, the preparation for war has been discreet so as not to excite the population, and to leave the door open for a peaceful settlement.

[Today, however, says The Post correspondent, the Polish government must have decided that it was useless to continue the game of appeasement. The Poles often say that they know the Germans much better than the British do, and that force is the only argument Germany understands and respects. It is probably correct to say that the Poles want to force Britain's hand by calling the general mobilization.—Editor's note.]

A blackout was ordered for the capital tonight.

Steamers were warned by radio that "entering of Polish waters was dangerous."

The announcement was made in both Polish and English in the middle of a musical program.

Steamers destined for Gdynia were ordered to stop outside Polish waters and ask for a pilot to take them to the port.

The announcement of additional mobilization was followed by a communique which stated that Germany "has started an aggressive policy with regard to the Polish republic."

"Poland Endangered"

Recent events, according to this communique, "leave no doubt but that Poland is endangered."

This brought the Polish-British mutual assistance pact into sharp relief.

By the terms of this pact, Poland has the right to determine when she considers her independence, territory and integrity threatened.

German aggressiveness, declared today's communique, is manifested in "the German press campaign; in the statements of leaders of the German state, some of which contain threats; in systematic border incidents, and, finally, in the concentration of German mobilized forces along Poland's frontiers."

The communique asserted that Poland's intentions are entirely defensive.

Effective Today

Official circles here said they had no knowledge of reports in London that Hitler had indicated a willingness to negotiate directly with this country.

The same reply was given to questions on reports of a suggestion in Berlin for a Polish envoy to discuss a possible settlement with the German leader.

Foreign observers noted that the extended mobilization was not effective until tomorrow, which meant it could be countermanded if any last-minute change in the situation permitted.

Throngs Gather

Throngs of civilians, many with spades for digging trenches, gathered wherever the mobilization posters were displayed.

Previously, reservists had been called up through individual notification.

Foreign observers believed the concentration of German troops in Slovakia was a leading factor in the order.

Official circles had described this concentration as creating a "very grave" situation.

Partial mobilization of Polish reservists began last March, after Germany made her first demand on this country. At that time between 500,000 and 750,000 men were called up.

Danzig Arrests Charged

Official circles tonight reported a continuance of "German aggression" in Danzig.

It was charged that two more Polish customs inspectors had been arrested and that "mass arrests" have been made of Polish railwaymen.

Officials also charged that Danzig police arrested two Polish officials who had been commissioned to negotiate with Danzig authorities, at their request, for a working agreement for normal functioning of Polish railways through Danzig.

Officials here charged the two were arrested after the conference and said their present whereabouts is unknown.

Consuls Held Plotters

Official circles also charged German consuls at Katowice and Teschen had been implicated in subversive German plots.

Both consuls, it was alleged, were implicated in the case of Hans Tren, a Polish citizen of German blood, who allegedly confessed to the smuggling of bombs in suitcases into Poland.

Tren was said to have made a deposition which was in the hands of the Polish government.

Officials reported they had found a key code under the swastika armband of some Germans arrested which revealed the numbers and names of other Germans.

Nazi Military Law Decreed For Slovakia

Troop Concentration On Polish Border Estimated at 300,000

By the Associated Press

Bratislava, Slovakia, Aug. 30.—The Slovak government today surrendered its powers to a German army of occupation.

Neutral observers estimated that German forces in Slovakia now exceed 300,000 men, concentrated at four strategic passes along the mountainous 250-mile frontier with Poland.

A government decree said that German law prevailed in the small nation over which Adolf Hitler established a protectorate last March when he finally partitioned Czecho-Slovakia. Hitler then also guaranteed Slovakia's independence for 25 years.

Premier Hails Occupation

Premier Josef Tiso of Slovakia hailed the German military occupation as guaranteeing the nation's independence "against the Polish menace."

Trains crowded with German soldiers were running on all Slovakia's main rail routes while civilian traffic was virtually at a standstill.

Squadrons of German pursuit planes and heavy bombers continually passed over Bratislava bound north for Slovak airports, where strict efforts were made to keep their operations secret.

"In Hands of German Army"

From Premier Tiso on down, officials of the "independent" Slovak government insisted that Slovak soldiers and Hlinka guardsmen (members of the ruling party's military organization) must fight "shoulder to shoulder" with German troops.

"I warn the population," the premier said, "that the administration all over Slovakia is in the hands of the German army command and every Slovak who offends its orders will have to answer before German military courts and be punishable under German laws."

Slovaks had to provide automobiles, horses, carts, foodstuffs and other materials as required by the German army.

It was declared privately that Slovakia would face a severe food shortage if the German occupation continued indefinitely.

Canadian Plea Answered

Ottawa, Ontario, Aug. 30 (Canadian Press).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said tonight he had received acknowledgement of the peace appeals he cabled Friday to the leaders of the German, Polish and Italian governments.

He said he was advised yesterday by Dr. Erich Windels, German consul-general here, that Fuehrer Hitler had asked that Mackenzie King be advised his message had been received. There was no comment from Hitler.

Jan Pawlica, consul-general for Poland, also notified the prime minister he had been instructed to say that President Moscicki appreciated the desire of Canada to further peaceful negotiation.

Premier Mussolini of Italy replied directly on Sunday assuring Mackenzie King he would leave no effort untried that might lead to "a just and lasting peace."

British Refuses to Press Poland

cupation by the Reich of Slovakia—carried out during the past 72 hours—and ominous news of possible developments in Danzig, as grounds for these additional precautionary measures of a military character.

The British note—the most recent in what seems to be an endless series—was forwarded to the Fuehrer after a 90-minute cabinet session, and additional consultations at both 10 Downing street and the foreign office.

Desiring to make it clear immediately that it was unwilling to bring pressure to bear on Warsaw to accept the Berlin parley plan, the British government dispatched to the Fuehrer an interim message early yesterday morning to that effect.

After pointing to theobjections to negotiations of the sort Hitler proposed, the note went on to explain that if there were to be negotiations, they must be of a kind which the Poles entered of their free will, that in effect they must not be conducted under the shadow of military force.

Depends on Settlement

Since Hitler referred once again in his message to his desire for Anglo-German friendship, the British government reiterated that it reciprocated, but added that much in the future would depend on the manner in which the Polish-German dispute was regulated. For the rest the reply indicated clearly that there was no chance whatever in Britain's determination to stand by her pledges to Poland.

Persistent reports were current yesterday that Hitler had demanded the presence of the Polish emissaries in Berlin by midnight. Official quarters denied that this was the case, insisting that the Fuehrer had mentioned no time limit in his message. Thus it was said, there was nothing in the nature of an ultimatum in the German note.

Sir Nevile Henderson, Ambassador to Germany, is understood to have clarified this point in a brief conversation he had with the Fuehrer when he called Tuesday night.

Some interest was expressed here yesterday in the announcement of the Deutscher Dienst, semiofficial Nazi news service, that the position of the Reich has undergone no change, and that Hitler's final demands are the return of Danzig and the Corridor, and the liquidation in Poland of the "Macedonian" conditions.

Berlin Determined, Press Says

Deutscher Dienst defines the Corridor as that territory in which a German majority was polled at the last German Reichstag elections before the World War.

In conclusion the communique says that the two demands listed are of a "definite character," that they remain completely unaffected by the present exchanges of views between London and Berlin, and that Germany is unshakenly determined to obtain their fulfillment.

Those quarters in London which had knowledge of the contents of Hitler's message, were divided on the question whether the proposals and their implied rejection by the Poles had caused further tension in the situation. Some observers pointed out that at least Hitler had displayed a willingness "to talk" even if under conditions which the Poles could not accept.

Once again yesterday, United States Ambassador Kennedy played a conspicuous role in the comings and goings at Whitehall. He spent an hour at the foreign office in the afternoon and in the evening paid a visit to the residence of the prime minister.

The foreign office announced yesterday that the Government of the United States was among those which, as a matter of courtesy, were being kept fully informed of all developments in the crisis.

King Visits Whitehall

King George, accompanied by his brother, the Duke of Gloucester, drove from Buckingham Palace yesterday afternoon to the Whitehall district, where he paid surprise visits to both the war office and the air ministry.

[International News Service said some diplomatic circles believed the British note proposed immediate cessation of troop movements and mobilizations, pending negotiation of the German-Polish dispute and a general peace conference.

It was apparent that Britain was anxious to keep the exchange continuing as long as possible both in the hope of finding a basis of settlement and, as one diplomatic informant put it, to prolong the so-called "war of nerves" for its possible effect upon Germany.

Preparations Pushed

Activity in London indicated, however, that the British government was continuing to rush war preparations with the greatest possible speed.

During the past two days there has been more activity, both precautionary and diplomatic, than at any other period of the crisis.

Visitors at the foreign office today included the United States, French, Japanese, The Netherlands, Chinese and Greek ambassadors. The high commissioners for the dominions each called at the dominions' office twice to get reports on the situation.

Chamberlain received Arthur Greenwood, acting leader of the Labor opposition, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Liberal Party, to review the situation. They concluded there was no need for the immediate recall of Parliament as a result of Hitler's note.

Chamberlain Cheered

Crowds continued to pack Downing street and to cheer Chamberlain and Halifax as they entered and left their numerous conferences.

At one time there was a cry of "God bless Lord Halifax" when the foreign secretary left the prime minister's residence.

Reich Thanks Belgium for Mediation Plan

Only Italy Has Yet To Answer Offer of Leopold, Wilhelmina

By the Associated Press

Brussels, Aug. 30—Only Italy has yet to reply to the joint offer of mediation in the European crisis made by King Leopold of Belgium and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands.

Germany, France, England and Poland have acknowledged the proffer, although no call has yet been made by those powers for mediation by the two sovereigns.

Germany replied through its Ambassador, who visited Hubert Pierlot, foreign minister. An official communique said the Ambassador "expressed on behalf of his government its deep gratitude for this generous gesture."

Belgian Press Careful

The Belgian press, on government advice, has been careful to refrain from comment on the international situation which would embarrass the government.

Panama and Salvador notified King Leopold of their adherence to his call for peace made on behalf of the neutral Scandinavian nations.

The German viewpoint was reported to be that the outcome of the British-German diplomatic communications probably would take precedence over any immediate mediation by the neutral sovereigns.

Details of Offer Withheld

Strict silence was maintained officially today on details of the offer by the two sovereigns which was understood to include both mediation and a proposal for a conference of arbitration at The Hague.

Poland replied by requoting President Moscicki's answer to President Roosevelt on the desirability of mediation. The Polish reply remarked that previous efforts at mediation had evoked no German response.

Allies Expected To Strike First In North Italy

Crushing Arms Plant Would Drain Germany, Aid Blow at Austria

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 30.—Northern Italy, cockpit of Europe since the days of the Roman Empire, may be the scene of some of the earliest decisive fighting of the next European war—if it comes—with a French-British army striking through the Alpine passes against the heart of industrial Italy.

This is the opinion of neutral military observers and some retired British and French officers in London. They base it on four conditions:

Italy will not remain neutral, but will enter the fight on the side of Germany.

Germany's Siegfried Line and France's Maginot Line will stalemate each other along the old western front for at least a year, perhaps longer.

Germany, fearing hostile world feeling, will not invade France through Belgium or Holland.

Polish resistance will require the attention of at least half the German army for six months or more.

Factories Are in North

"Under these conditions it is easy to see why the theater of war should shift to northern Italy," one officer said. "That is the industrial region; the munitions industry is centered in Turin. A break through with the subsequent destruction of these plants would force Italy to call on Germany's none too extensive military stores, cripple Italy's fighting forces."

The character of the land favors the French. The passes through the Alps at Mont Cenis and Mont Genevre converge as they near the French frontier.

"With sufficient artillery the French could hold that road forever," said one expert.

Might Reach Austria

Going into Italy, the passes spread out. Given a number of roads over which to advance, the French could feint the Italians out of position, observers here believe.

The possibility of secondary operations even more dangerous to the axis armies was advanced by one observer.

Coast Held Vulnerable

Italy is considered by naval experts to be vulnerable, by reason of her geographic situation, to attack from the combined British and French Mediterranean fleets.

Should her fleet be swept out of the way, her long coasts might be subject to a raking from British-French guns.

The main body of the British fleet, already believed in position, would be expected to crack down the North Sea blockade, which was largely credited with bringing hungry Germany to her knees in the World War.

Plane "Shuttle" Possible

Military men admit British and French aid to Poland would be a tremendous task; the annihilation of Poland's army the primary German objective.

"The Germans cannot allow the Poles to remain unconquered for long," said one. "Such an army, highly mobile, familiar with the ground and of high morale, is always dangerous, doubly so to a highly mechanized force.

"The only aid I can see Britain and France giving to Poland is continuous bombing by plane of German munition dumps railheads and communication lines in Germany. The 'shuttle' plan of British and French bombers flying across Germany, 'laying their eggs,' refueling and reloading in Poland and repeating the procedure on the way back is far from being a military day dream."

Estimates as to the extent of Polish resistance differ, ranging from three months to a year.

Bad Roads Aid Poles

Here again the character of the country may be a decisive factor. Poland's western frontier has few good military roads. This undoubtedly would hinder the advance of a highly mechanized army.

Few military men believe the Germans' first aerial objective would be the bombing of London. Artillery preparation for a successful offensive against Poland must be assisted by aerial bombardment. Few believe the German air force numerous enough to split and do a thorough job on each front, especially against the new British fighting planes.

German reluctance to risk a sweep through Belgium and the Netherlands toward Paris would not be due entirely to regard for world opinion, it was believed.

"Today the Belgian fortifications are stronger. The Maginot line in turn extends along the Belgian frontier. It is doubtful whether the victorious sweep to the southwest which entertained German military men prior to 1914, could be attempted without colossal losses," an expert said.

Church Called Aid to Democracy

Williamstown, Mass., Aug. 30 (NS). The church is in a favorable position to further a program of social justice and thus support democracy, Samuel O. Clark, jr., Assistant U. S. Attorney General, told the Institute of Human Relations here tonight.

Clark said that within the traditional area of the Church's activities, which include education and enlightenment, its support for measures to alleviate economic distress can enjoy full play.

"It is my firm opinion, however, that only by the adoption of such a program can the Church throw its full weight into the present struggles of democracies for existence," he added.

War Industry Board Reports To Roosevelt

U. S. Preparing To Buy Essential Defense Imports

America kept abreast of world armament developments yesterday, quietly but steadily strengthening her own defenses and war material supplies, and maintaining alertness at key military points.

Highlighting the day's events was the first meeting in which the War Resources Board reported to President Roosevelt on its efforts to gear industry to any war needs.

Next in importance were Government preparations to begin a $100,000,000 purchase program authorized by Congress to build up stores of essential war material. The high command of the Army and Navy has hastened preparation of a list of strategic materials to be purchased with $10,000,000 which Congress provided to start the program this year. The balance becomes available over the next four years.

The Treasury is expected to call for bids in the near future. Included will be manganese ore, chrominum ore, tungsten ore, tin, quinine, quartz crystals for radio equipment and manila fiber.

The Army and Navy Munitions Board has designated 17 materials as "strategic," for the supply of which the United States is dependent wholly or partially on foreign sources.

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson sat with the President, Edward R. Stettinius, jr., chairman of the Resources Board, and the other members, in what they described as "a working conference" to analyze the plans of the agency.

Stettinius told reporters after the conference he would "like to be helpful," but there was no information to be released. With Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison and Johnson he emphasized that the board's plans were virtually completed and had been discussed with Mr. Roosevelt.

Board's Function Stated

Johnson pointed out that the Army's plans for industrial mobilization had been ready for a long time, but that the War Resources Board's position was to prepare industry for the economic dislocation and that it served also as advisor to the Army and Navy Munitions Board in keeping the services apprised of technological and industry progress.

Army officials emphasized that two industrial plans had been prepared by the military, one applicable in event of a war in which the United States was not a belligerent, and the other to be effective on American participation in hostilities.

A major premise of the plans is control of prices so that there will be no undue location of the domestic economic structure if heavy production demands are made on industry, the War Department made clear.

The War Resources Board, because its members are topflight business executives, is expected to recommend such revisions as might be advisable in the Army's plans, to meet the economic or operating requirements of business, as distinguished from the military.

All the data gathered by the Munitions Board and by the Army and have been given to the War Resources Board. The Resources Board, which has been in session almost continuously since its establishment some three weeks ago, will meet here again today.

Officials of the Social Security Board have advised the War Resources Board that 30,157,694 persons were employed in 1937 in industries covered by the social security system. The SSB said Stettinius had asked information on the ages and occupational composition of the country's industrial population.

Members Present

Other members of the board are Karl T. Compton, Walter S. Gifford, Harold G. Moulton, John Lee Pratt and Col. H. K. Rutherford, present for the conference with the President.

Carrying out the Army's program for increasing the strength of the garrison and weapons in the Panama Canal Zone, 18 of the Army's fastest pursuit planes, based at Selfridge Field, Mich., were ordered by the War Department to fly immediately to Panama. The squadron will be stationed there permanently, the department said.

No plans have been made as yet to increase the garrisons and strength of Army centers in the Philippines or at Schofield Barracks in Hawaii, the Department said, explaining: "An increase in these places was not included in the current augmentation program."

The Navy moved the destroyer J. Fred Talbott into Gatun Lake, near the center of the Panama Canal, as a precautionary measure during the European crisis. The step came as the German motor-liner Leipzig, one of the few Nazi vessels to reach the canal since the situation became tense, arrived at Cristobal.

Naval station commanders throughout the service have tightened up operations of the several bases, with increased vigilance the order of the day with respect to visitors, particularly along the West Coast and at Norfolk. The Navy Department said no general order had been issued, as each commanding officer had authority to take whatever precautionary steps were necessary.

It was not anticipated there would be any unusual activity at Pearl Harbor, in Hawaii, other than such restrictions as might be laid down to meet some local condition by the commanding admiral, the Navy said. Pearl Harbor is the major Pacific base of the Navy, followed by San Diego and San Pedro, Calif., with Norfolk the major base on the East Coast, followed by the Brooklyn Navy Yard, which is a construction and repair base.

Bremen Released With Other Ships

an immediate return to Europe to evacuate Americans.

Raff said he would confer today with Treasury officials on the procedure for forfeiture of the Wiegand's bond, posted at Boston, its first port of call, to cover its stay in American waters.

Fuel Supply Low

The Wiegand had insufficient coal aboard to carry it to Germany. Customs authorities expressed the belief it may have headed for some Central or South American port to refuel before complying with the Nazi order to all German ships to come home at once.

Customs officials, meanwhile, investigated the visit to the freighter off Marcus Hook, Pa., by a man and woman before dawn Sunday. The launch operator who took them to the ship said the man claimed he was a ship's chandler and the woman was his wife. But chandlers regularly supplying the Wiegand informed customs authorities that no member of the company had been in touch with the ship after it left Philadelphia.

As the Bremen pulled away from the New York pier, its band triumphantly played German martial airs, including the "Horst Wessel," instead of the customary "Aloha." When the band stopped, officers and men, who had stood on deck with somber countenances, cheered and shouted "Heil Hitler." The liner, which had been detained nearly two days, carried exceptionally heavy food and fuel supplies, but no passengers.

British Boats Sail

The Aquitania, carrying 261 passengers, including Sir Ronald Lindsay, retiring British Ambassador, followed the Bremen by a half hour. The Transylvania, also of British registry, preceded the Bremen. The French liner Normandie, which had been searched like the others, was granted clearance papers, but remained at the pier pending instructions from its Paris headquarters.

The Bremen dipped her colors in salute to the Normandie, lying along side the next pier, as she pulled away. The Normandie responded.

The ships had been searched for arms on orders from President Roosevelt, but no weapons were found. The President explained that he wanted to protect the Government against possible damage claims in case war should break out and the ships should be converted into privateers at sea.

Bremen Detained Longest

The Bremen had been detained much longer for the search, according to Associated Press dispatches, than the other ships. Officers of the liner fumed over the delay. Capt. Adolf Aherns, master of the ship, complained yesterday afternoon that customs inspectors were "searching an empty swimming pool."

The haste with which the Bremen sought to leave New York was said in official quarters to explain why the thorough search was ordered. Capt. William Drechsel, marine superintendent of the North German Lloyd Line, said the haste to return home was "just for the safety of the ship, which cost $20,000,000."

Detention of the Bremen resulted in bitter attacks on President Roosevelt by Nazi officials, according to a dispatch from Berlin.

"It's a bad time," one spokesman was quoted as saying, "for Roosevelt to talk about saving peace on the one hand while simultaneously taking measures which seem to be deliberate aggravation."

There was general belief, the dispatch said, that the "Bremen incident" would bring a sharp diplomatic protest to Washington.

The State Department here revealed that Dr. Hans Thomsen, charge d'affaires of the German Embassy, had communicated with Assistant Secretary of State Berle to ask why the ship was being held.

Berle, the Department said, told him inspection of the vessel by Treasury Department customs agents and the Commerce Department safety inspectors was in accordance with the regulations of those departments.

He emphasized the action was entirely nondiscriminatory and applied to vessels of all possible belligerents in American ports.

The S. S. Washington is due in New York tomorrow from Europe. The ship is carrying some 950 passengers, including Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, the President's mother; his son, John and Mrs. John Roosevelt. Also aboard is Charles M. Schwab, steel magnate.

Pan American Airways announced yesterday it would reroute its transatlantic air service to include stops at Bermuda.

Italian Ship Seeks Haven

Mystery attended the arrival of the Italian steamer Ida Z. O., in Hampton Roads yesterday, bound for Barcelona and Genoa with a cargo of cotton from Galveston. At sea, she received a message to put in at Hampton Roads and await orders. Coast Guard patrol boats circled around the ship at intervals and occasionally swept her with a searchlight.

Chief Franco Aide Heads Council for Production in War

Madrid, Aug. 30 (AP).—Gen. Franco today appointed Gen. Juan Vigon, chief of his personal staff, as head of a supreme general staff charged with studying means of making Spain self-sufficient in the production of all commodities, war materials and ammunition in the event of war.

Importance was attached to interviews granted at foreign ministry to the British, French and Portuguese ambassadors and the papal nuncio.

Since conclusion of the German-Soviet Russian non-aggression accord France has been working to swing Spain away from the Rome-Berlin axis and toward neutrality in case of a European war.

DON'T SCRATCH, SOOTHE THE IRRITATION

Quick relief from the maddening itch of eczema, psoriasis, poison ivy, and irritation about the rectum or personal parts is obtained by applying Resinol Ointment. Leave it on over night. It lessens the desire to scratch, and eases the irritation.

The soothing effect of Resinol takes the sting from the irritated places and makes you more comfortable. The skin heals sooner, too, with the help of Resinol, as its oily base holds the medication in active contact with the tortured parts.

For gentle cleansing of irritated skin, Resinol Soap is excellent because it has no excess of free alkali and is so refreshing. Many nurses suggest and use Resinol Ointment and Soap—why don't you try them?

Japan Speeds Troops to Face Russia

Soviet Pact With Nazis Stirs Fears of Manchukuo Clash

By Relman Morin,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Tokyo, Aug. 30.—Japan's fears that Soviet Russia, freed from European pressure by her nonaggression pact with Germany, may sieze the initiative in the Far East by causing a great flow of Japanese troops through Korea and North China into Manchukuo.

On a journey just completed through Manchukuo as far as the Outer Mongolian border battle zone this correspondent found troop and supply trains choking the railways. They were being rushed toward vulnerable points along the more than 1,000 miles of frontier across which Japanese troops face those of the Red army.

Japanese military men are convinced that one of the major considerations of the German-Soviet nonaggression pact was an undertaking by Germany—so recently linked to Japan by the anti-Comintern treaty—not to interfere with any Russian moves against Japan.

Confidence Turns to Anxiety

Hitherto most Japanese have felt in a new Russo-Japanese war they believed bound to come they could choose the time and place for its opening. The Moscow-Berlin pact, however, has changed this confidence into anxiety expressed by Japanese in all walks of life throughout Japan, Korea and Manchukuo.

No estimates are available on the reinforcements for the Kwantung army, Japan's powerful garrison in Manchukuo. Its strength has been estimated at 500,000, approximately equal that of all the Russian forces in far eastern Siberia. But all indications are that reinforcements are very large. Japan has about 1,000,000 men engaged in her two-year-old effort to conquer China.

Air Raids Feared

Manchukuo's chief cities, Mukden, Harbin and Hsinking, are under light control as precautions against Russian air raids. Manchukuo also was full of rumors of Russian troop movements to the Far East, matching those of Japan into Manchukuo.

There were reports also that the struggle between Japanese and Russians along the Khalka river, the Mongolian battlefield, was expanding. In Tokyo, however, available communiques report only the now commonplace artillery duels.

Japan Warns Britain

Tokyo, Aug. 30 (AP).—Japan's new premier, Gen. Nobuyuki Abe, declared in a statement to the Japanese press tonight that Japan was determined to "deal firmly" with nations which fail "to understand our position" and co-operate with Japan in China.

Observers interpreted this as a warning principally to Great Britain, the nation chiefly accused of obstructing Japan's policy on the mainland.

The new cabinet, appointed yesterday, was installed by Emperor Hirohito today.

Italian Liner Strands Americans

Hongkong, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Thirteen Americans who sailed from Hongkong for Europe on the Italian liner Victoria on August 12, were reported today to be stranded in Massawah, Eritrea, in Italian East Africa. The Victoria was believed to have stopped at Massawah and all passengers forced to disembark.

Denmark Believes War Can Be Avoided

Oslo, Aug. 30 (INS).—Danish Foreign Minister Munch, here for a conference of the four Scandinavian foreign ministers, declared tonight that everything was calm in Denmark and that there was every reason to hope that war would be avoided.

Finnish Foreign Minister Erkko also was optimistic.

Roosevelt Voices Hopes for Peace

situation, Hull said it was a matter of opinion; sometimes it looked better and sometimes worse.

Presenting his letters to the President, Lord Lothian remarked it was unfortunate that "I assume my office at a time when the whole world is disturbed by war, rumors of war and by preparations for war." He continued:

"It is the first purpose of the government I have the honor to represent to do everything in its power to maintain peace, to bring about whatever political and economic adjustments reason and justice may require by pacific means and so help to bring the nations back to stable prosperity and stable peace. They are confident that in this search for peace they are only pursuing the same ends which you, Mr. President, and the American people also have at heart."

The tall, ruddy diplomat said he was instructed by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to express Their Majesties' grateful thanks for their hospitable welcome here last June, and to say their friendly impressions would not soon fade.

President Roosevelt promptly reciprocated, stressed the "close friendship" between American and British peoples, and expressed hope for the "tranquillity, prosperity and happiness" of Englishmen under their "wise and patriotic" rule.

Then he voiced this Government's sincere desire "that the relationship of mutual cordiality and mutual respect now happily existing between our countries shall continue to prevail as one of the cornerstones upon which the structure of peace is founded."

Backing from Ecuador

Earlier the President acknowledged with the "deepest appreciation" a note from President Narvaez of Ecuador expressing that government's adherence to the President's peace principles.

State Department experts recently reported "ready" with measures to safeguard American interests in event of war, continued to explore every possible precautionary step.

Reports spread that with neutrality act powers officials had considered economic action against Germany in event of war, in addition to countervailing duties levied on German imports.

War Council Takes Over Reich

the chancellery, Dr. Lammers."

Marshal Goering is chairman, not so much as head of the air force as in his capacity of Hitler's right-hand man and dictator of the four-year plan.

The function of Gen. Keitel is to be that of representing the military in question of transportation, food and the like. He is not on the council as a military strategist. He is to make known the material needs of the armed forces and the council will meet them.

Hess is to maintain connections with the Nazi Party, of which he is Deputy Fuehrer.

Although at first blush the absence of the name of Heinrich Himmler, chief of police and of the secret service, might seem a surprise, it must be remembered that Himmler is subordinate to the minister of interior. For purposes of concentration, the number was kept as small as possible.

For Civilian Effort

Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop is not a member of this council, nor is Baron Konstantin Von Neurath, who holds the title of chairman of the secret council of state.

Nor are the active heads of the army and navy members—Col. Walter von Brauchitsch and Grand Admiral Erich Raeder.

The reason, it was said authoritatively, was that this is neither a political nor a military council. Instead, it has to do with concentrating all civil effort toward winning a war in case it comes.

The decision to set up this special defense council at this particular time was prompted by the desire to assure the public that every precaution is being taken early.

The announcement of the council was regarded as particularly opportune at this moment when Poland's virtually generally mobilization was being announced.

The decree was followed swiftly by the delivery by British Ambassador Sir Nevile Henderson to Von Ribbentrop of Great Britain's reply to Hitler's note of Tuesday night—another swift move in a secret exchange of communications.

But it was indicated Hitler's flat demands still are for Danzig and the Polish Corridor from Poland.

Goering, as head of the new inner cabinet group, will exert authority second only to that of the Fuehrer.

The decree was issued after cabinet consultations which started in the afternoon and lasted almost until midnight. It was immediately read over all radio stations.

Optimism Continues

Officialdom continued tonight to profess optimism over the final issue of secret negotiations going on with Britain.

Informed quarters declared, however, that Germany's demand for the return of Danzig and the Polish Corridor remained unchanged. They indicated the initiative now lay with Britain.

The additional Polish mobilization order, which appeared to have come unexpectedly to the Germans, was, however, characterized by Wilhelmstrasse quarters as "not likely to foster the possibility of direct contact between Germany and Poland."

The newspaper Der Angriff declared that "England must find a way out" of the crisis since neither Germany nor Poland could afford continued widespread mobilization.

Members of the Reichstag, many of whom met with Hitler last Sunday, were ordered to be ready for a second meeting at any moment.

Other newspapers asserted that a German-Russian agreement to "consult" on political matters was functioning now, both in Berlin and in Moscow.

Greater emphasis was placed here on denunciation of foreign reports that the Soviet Union's failure to ratify its nonaggression pact with Germany signified some joker in the Russian pack of cards. The pact is regarded here as having gone into force with its signature, and indignation over these reports has pushed the German interpretations of the treaty's significance higher than ever.

Moscow reports that Soviet military strength on the Polish frontiers is being raised instead of lowered, have been published here under headlines which suggest the dream of all Germans—that the Polish nut may now finally be gripped in a nutcracker that can crack.

In foreign circles in Berlin this German vehemence recalls the violently assertive language used after the Salzburg meeting ten days ago to reassert the strength of the Rome-Berlin axis, but which served only to reawaken old doubts about that strength.

Nazis Seen as Cracking

London (Thursday), Aug. 31 (U.P.). London morning newspapers today professed to see indications that Germany is beginning to crack under the strain of Europe's war of nerves, and the News Chronicle suggested that "this should be the time above all others when Britain should stand absolutely firm . . our advantage should be pushed."

'In Name Only' Scores Hit at RKO-Keith's

Triple-Star Cast Gives New Film Brisk Interpretation

By Nelson B. Bell

"IN NAME ONLY." RKO-Radio picturization of a screen play by Richard Sherman, adapted from the novel, "Memory of Love," by Bessie Breuer, co-starring Carole Lombard, Cary Grant and Kay Francis, with Charles Coburn, Helen Vinson, Katherine Alexander, Jonathan Hale, Maurice Moscovich, Peggy Ann Garner and Spencer Charters. Directed by John Cromwell. Reviewed Wednesday evening. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

A closely woven succession of events, excellent acting and adroit direction serve to refurbish a familiar theme in the thoroughly diverting and, at times, moving screen play that inaugurated its Washington engagement in RKO-Keith's Theater last evening at 8:45. Were the word "Wife" prefixed to the title, a complete index would be afforded to the theme of this expertly contrived comedy-romance that cloaks the antiquity of its triangular story in new dressings of humor, gayety and high spirits, only occasionally shot through with the deeper emotions.

"In Name Only" points out with some asperity precisely what complications can be brought into the lives of true lovers and those nearest them by an acquisitive, mercenary and vengeful wife, who refuses to divorce her husband in order that he may wed an honest and respectable young woman, with no predatory instincts whatsoever, whom he has met by merest chance. The wife's shrewd and shrewish plans are heartily furthered by another catty young wife who is her "best friend," albeit not above poaching a little on Alec Walker's time, interest and patience on her own account.

The Best Laid Plans

Maida Walker, after perceiving that she is getting nowhere rapidly in holding the counterfeit "affection" of the man she married solely for his money—and who knows it—accompanies his parents to Paris on the promise to secure a divorce in the quietest possible manner. She has no intention of doing any such gracious thing, but prolongs her absence beyond all reasonable length for the kindly purpose of giving Alec and Julie Eden, the mother of a small daughter who would make an interesting witness in court, ample rope to "hang themselves." It somehow doesn't work out quite that way, although Alec has to come down with a terrific attack of pneumonia and struggle for breath in an oxygen tent to prevent it. The revelatory bedside scenes are the ones that pay off Maida in something considerably better than her own coin.

A familiar plot, yes, but, as I have said, one which, in this instance, has been given new life and new zest by the deftness of Richard Sherman's adaptation of Bessie Breuer's novel of "Memory of Love" and the manner of its enactment. The blithe mood in which the play has been written is taken full advantage of by Carole Lombard, Cary Grant, Kay Francis and their associate players, led by Katherine Alexander, Nella Walker, Charles Coburn, Peggy Ann Garner, the precocious Washington child actress, and numerous others.

Breezy Humor Is Factor in Retelling Of Familiar Story

First honors, by all means, I should say, go to Cary Grant for so thoroughly natural, honest and amusing a portrayal of the central male character. His performance adds further proof that he rapidly is becoming one of the most facile and most reliable of the cinema's male stars. Carole Lombard, as Julie Eden, the young fashion artiste, shares the comedy scenes with Grant on his own footing. She is as assured, as spontaneously natural and as convincing as he is. Kay Francis, on the other hand, finds scant outlet for any sense of humor in her assignment to the subtly treacherous part of Maida Walker. She is as velvety and disarming a menace to domestic happiness and tranquility as ever clawed a friend. Helen Vinson, long absent from the local screen, as Suzanne, conceals a comparable nature less skillfully beneath a thin veneer of polished gush.

The Quintuplets Again

The supporting roles of prime importance are interpreted with characteristic skill by Charles Coburn, as the elder Walker; Nella Walker, his wife; Katherine Alexander, as Laura; Jonathan Hale, the family physician and counselor, and Maurice Moscovich, as his learned consultant. Their joint psychiatric ministrations finally bring order and a "happy ending" out of the chaos projected into their lives by Alec's frustrated wife.

The chief supplementary attraction on the new bill is "Five Times Five," a glimpse of the latter-day life of the Dionne Quins, with Alexander Woolcott taking part in the film as well as supplying a too, too sweet running commentary on the pictured incidents. Donald Duck in Walt Disney's "The Autograph Hunter," one of his best, and the Pathe News further augment a program that both packed and pleased the house at the first performance yesterday.

D. C. Firemen Put Maid's Iron in Fire

Reversing their normal roles, firemen from Engine Company No. 24 yesterday helped put an iron in the fire. They were called to 907 E street southwest, when Hannah Triplen, colored maid, of 907 E street southwest, found the door of her employer's apartment locked. Firemen hoisted a ladder to a second floor window and opened the door from the inside. The maid told them she had to get the ironing done.

Infant Deaths Halved in 20 Years, Says Surety Firm

Infant deaths in the United States are today only half as frequent as 20 years ago, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. announced yesterday.

Sanitary measures, improved foods and education of the mother in care of babies have reduced deaths from diarrhea and enteritis in the first year of life from 20 per 1,000 live births to 4.1 per 1,000, the statement said.

Deaths due to premature birth and congenital debility have been similarly reduced by better pre-natal care, the statement added, while deaths due to infant syphilis have been somewhat reduced in the same way.

Young Actor Grows Old Before His Time!

Lee Cobb Is Elderly in "Golden Boy" at 27; "Oz" Music to Cover Block on F Street; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

PAYING WASHINGTON a flying visit today, William Holden, the young newcomer to roles of importance on the screen, necessarily will be more or less the center of interest when "Golden Boy," in which he plays the title role, opens at the Earle Theater tomorrow. This is as it should be, because Mr. Holden, his first time out, steps in there and troupes on even terms with such veterans of note as Barbara Stanwyck, Adolphe Menjou, Sam Levene, Ed Brophy, Joseph Calleia and numerous others.

BELL

There is, however, another member of the cast who is entitled to a little attention. His career parallels that of Joe Bonaparte in the Clifford Odets play even more closely than the youthful Mr. Holden's. This would be Lee J. Cobb, cast in the role of the "Golden Boy's" father, the role in which the Capital also saw him on the stage in the Group Theater production at the National.

Mr. Cobb, it seems, entertains a deep-seated ambition sometime to appear before the public, in one medium or another, in a character somewhere nearly approximating his own age. Because he has portrayed nothing but elderly men on either stage or screen during his 11 years as an actor, everyone takes Mr. Cobb to be practically in his dotage. As a matter of fact, he is 27.

A native New Yorker, Cobb, like the pivotal character in the Odets drama, was seemingly destined to be a concert violinist. He loved music, was an apt pupil and suffered great anguish of soul as well as body when a badly mangled hand put an end to his dreams of some day playing in Carnegie Hall. Restless, energetic and ambitious, he turned his attention to aeronautical engineering—against the wishes of his family. The new pursuit led to study at night school at the City College of New York.

College dramatics supplied his first impetus in the direction of the theater as a profession. He left New York, journeyed to California and served a valuable apprenticeship with the Pasadena Community Playhouse, one of the most famous theater workshops in the United States.

Returning to New York, he became a member of the Group Theater, making his Broadway debut as an offstage voice in "Waiting for Lefty." Whether it was an old man's voice or not I wouldn't know, but Cobb, whatever the circumstances of his invisible debut, found himself playing old men successively in "Till the Day I Die," "Johnny Johnson," "Crime and Punishment" and "Danger—Men Working."

In 1937, he was assigned a role in "Golden Boy"—that of the cynical, politically-minded friend of the Bonaparte family, Mr. Carp. Then he moved over into the role of the senior Bonaparte and offered the characterization that won him a film contract. Only once has he achieved his wish. In the London engagement of "Golden Boy," he appeared as the matchmaker, the role now played by Ed Brophy on the screen. Now you know.

So, just as that last paragraph was finished, Publicity Director Frank La Falce, of the Warner Brothers organization, jingled the phone to say that William Holden, "Golden Boy" himself, is leaving New York at 11 o'clock this morning and will arrive in Washington by plane at 12:20 p. m. Without so much as time to tune up his violin or pull on his boxing gloves, he will be whisked to the rooms of the Variety Club, in the Willard Hotel, for that luncheon engagement with the guys and gals of the press. More of this later.

Having been rained out of the Monument Grounds on Tuesday night, Shakespeare's "The Merry Wives of Windsor," last of the Summer Festival programs, will be presented in the National Sylvan Theater tonight at 8:15. It will be preceded by a 45-minute concert by the Washington Civic Orchestra, beginning at 7:30. In case Jupiter Pluvius is still scowling—and the weather man says this is unlikely—the performance will be postponed again until tomorrow night.

Inspired by the wide interest manifested by both press and public in Elisabeth Bergner's first dual role, in "Stolen Life," the romantic drama of twin sisters in love with the same man, the Little Theater management announces that a "Twins Day" will be observed tomorrow. Boiled down to what matters, this means that any pair of feminine twins is invited to attend "Stolen Life" tomorrow as guests of the theater. The only catch in it—since the doorman is no Solomon—is that each brace of distaff duplicates presenting themselves must be dressed alike.

Personal aside to G. W. Patterson, 3607 Newark street: "Night Must Fall," starring Robert Montgomery, with Rosalind Russell opposite, was filmed at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio in Culver City, Calif. Four members of the original London company of the stage play—Dame May Whitty, Merle Tottenham, Kathleen Harrison and Matthew Bolton—came over to this side to play their original roles in the picture. Dose this suffice?

The "Wizard of Oz" influence will spread all over the block on F street tomorrow. With this stupendous Technicolor production opening on the screen at the Palace, the overture at Loew's Capitol Theater will be comprised of a special arrangement of the "Oz" musical numbers, several of which already have been catapulted into the hit class. Marjorie King, runner-up in the recent Going Native" popularity vote and a soprano of delightful voice, will be heard in the "Rainbow" number as soloist with the orchestra.

George A. (Cotton) Crouch, assistant zone manager, has been elected president of the Warner Club of Washington, an organization composed of employes of the Warner Brothers Theaters and executive offices in the Washington territory. General Zone Manager John J. Payette continues as honorary president of the club, which is an affiliate of the national organization of Warner clubs.

Vice presidents, in charge of special activities, have been elected as follows: Welfare, Harry E. Lohmeyer, Washington district manager; entertainment, Fred Thomas, manager Earle Theater; membership, Fred McMillan, manager Silver Theater, Silver Spring, Md.; contributions and loans, C. E. McGowan, contact manager, Washington office. Nat B. Browne and George Larkin, of the executive office, were elected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 30.—Talked with Jean Hersholt on the set of "Dr. Christian." He tells me Screen Guild Show resumes in September, that Guild will get $310,000 for 31 weeks. Added to money it already has, that brings total to more than half a million for the actors' home as planned last year. However, construction won't begin till there's enough for several years' upkeep. So Jimmy Roosevelt is working on the higher-ups to get one-half of 1 per cent of their salaries. If Jimmy can't get it, no one can. And some of the biggest have only given $50 to date. We all know that there are more $25-a-day actors than the ones with big contracts—but they all give their one-half.

HOPPER

The reason one player clicks and another doesn't is personality—always. Jean says even Helen Hayes' personality is greater than her acting. He feels you should recognize your selling points and not get in a huff because you're being paid for being yourself in a picture—which is in itself a great compliment. Give the public what it wants. "Now, I'd like to be playing dashing adventurers. But they want me as a comfortable old family doctor. That's okay with me."

Alfred Hitchcock gave a party for his wif at Chasen's. An elderly lady sat at end of table alone. No one knew her. She sat through cocktails and dinner. Turned out to be a little old lady Hitchcock hired through Central Casting to baffle his guests. What next?

A new small-time agent nearly had apoplexy when Charley Richards and Leo McCarey called him over to their table. "Listen," said Charley, "We've got a part for your client that's perfect. Written only for him. How much do you want?" "Fifteen hundred dollars a week and three-week guarantee," the little agent gasped. Charley snapped back, "He's too tall," and went on with his lunch.

Jack Taylor, extra, will go over a 22-foot falls at Grants Falls in a canoe for a scene in "Northwest Passage." He'll get $250 for it—and I hope his life. All Jack asked for was a stout canoe.

Pinky Wolfson, producer of "Allegheny Frontier" all set for Europe. Was told no passports were being issued for Europe or China. He could go to Japan or South America if he wished. "Why go to South America?" asked Pinky. "Every time you get off the boat you're in Tia Juana."

Charles Laughton got tangled with several producers over war news, saying that it was easy for Americans to sit back and criticize England's policy, that we weren't expecting to be bombed in the morning and had no idea what it felt like to play bridge in a bomb-proof cellar. Wonder why he's kicking? He's 6,000 miles away from it.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 30.—There are several sizable wagers in Hollywood over the outcome of the Sonja Henie-Victor Orsatti romance. Will the little skating queen wed her good looking agent, or will they remain merely client and manager? They get here some time tomorrow, Vic having crossed on the Normandie with Little Henie and her mother, and maybe they will answer the question all Hollywood is asking.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Sonja starts work immediately in "Everything Happens At Night?" and I was very interested to hear today that Robert Cummings had been borrowed from Universal to share honors with La Henie and Ray Milland. Cummings is one of the most up-and-coming youngsters in Hollywood. He is very good in "The Under-Pup." He also registered effectively in "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," and has just finished "Rio," with Sigrid Gurie and Basil Rathbone. Keep an eye on him.

Reginald Gardiner is much too charming to play a disagreeable Storm Trooper—but when I tell you he's been signed to play a sympathetic captain of the goose-steppers in "The Dictators," Charlie Chaplin's picture, you'll realize there's plenty of opportunity for his comedy. Personally, I hope that this is the turn toward bigger and better things for Reggie—for he hasn't been getting the breaks he deserves. Speaking of "The Dictators," Charlie Chaplin and Paulette took to the high seas on their yacht today to brush up on their lines. Paulette already knows her dialogue—and Charlie's going into retirement to master his before facing the camera Tuesday.

I haven't seen George Montgomery, so I don't know whether he's another Gary Cooper or not—but he certainly has Gary's authentic cowboy background. Recently signed for "The Cisco Kid," with Cesar Romero and Binnie Barnes, Montgomery hails from the wide-open spaces of Montana, where his dad owns one of the biggest ranches in the State. Amusing to hear how he got his break in the movies. A couple of months ago he came here to say goodby to his brother Mike, who was heading for South America. On a farewell round of the night clubs, an agent spotted him—and, presto change, a test at Twentieth Century-Fox was the result. A year ago I would have said his case was unusual—but sudden success is now becoming a habit.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Anatole Litvak dining with a blonde at the Troc, and it wasn't Ann Sheridan; good news that Leonard Penn, who has been so dangerously ill, was able to occupy a ringside seat with Gladys George at Slapsie Maxie's; Charles Laughton and Elsa Lanchester, believe it or not, have become our most confirmed night clubbers. After a session on "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" set, Charlie apparently finds it relaxing; Jane Bryan's 19-year-old brother, Jim, was rushed to the Santa Monica Hospital for an appendectomy; acting as happy as if they had never been apart, were the reconciled Walter Pidgeon's dining at one of our well-known night spots; Orson Welles, who has gone Hollywood with a vengeance, trocking with Lili Damita and Dolores Del Rio.

Bing Crosby has been offered the unprecedented sum of $20,000 to appear for two days at the San Francisco auto show; Mary Healy and Pranchot Tone continuing their dueting at the House of Murphy; Nat Wolff has gone east to meet Edna Best when the New Amsterdam docks. She is on board with her twin boys and Herbert Marshall's daughter. Talk that there will be an immediate divorce from Marshall is current in Hollywood.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

GEOFFREY GORER is the distinguished author of five anthropological volumes, including "African Dancer," "Bali and Angkor" and "Himalayan Village" . . . The Rockefeller Foundation, impressed with Mr. Gorer's talents, has retained him in a survey which will require four years to complete . . . The assignment of this famed anthropologist is to visit the Hollywood studios to analyze the production of movies, study the aims of the film officials and then tour the cities of America to report audience reaction to these same movies.

HELEN HAYES' mother has sold to the Saturday Evening Post the magazine rights to the biography she's written about her daughter . . . The day after the sale was consummated, she phoned the beauty salon of Helena Rubinstein, and arranged for an appointment . . . "What kind of treatments do you wish?" she was asked . . . "Madam," she replied, "I want the works."

MR. AND MRS. Harpo Marx, who adopted a son two years ago, will go to Chicago's Cradle to adopt a sister for him. She'll be named "Minnie" . . . Salvador Dali, the futuristic painter, made an excellent sketch of Harpo playing the harp. Marx pleaded with Dali to stop right there—, but the artist paid no heed and added the Dali touch. He painted a lobster atop Harpo's head and a piece of liver on the harp . . . When Lillian Gish witnessed the premiere of "Stanley and Livingstone" it was the first she ever attended. Her contracts with Griffith provide that she doesn't have to attend premieres—and she never did . . . Lionel Stander is being penalized by the studios because he campaigned for Gov. Olson. Olson will reward him, however, with a job as racing commissioner—an enviable post in horse-conscious Hollywood.

GEORGE BLANCHINE, who directed his wife, Zorina, in the movie adaptation of "On Your Toes," will be naturalized within the next few weeks and is studying the information on which he expects to be questioned . . . "How many judges on the United States Supreme Court?" he asked . . . "Nine," Zorina told him . . . "Oh, of course," he answered. "I should've known. I remember it was nine" . . . "You remember?" Zorina asked. "Then you've seen the court in session?" . . . "No," he confessed. "I remember—from the Supreme Court scene in 'I'd Rather Be Right.'"

DEAN LANDIS, who is presiding at the Harry Bridges trial, won $70 in a poker game he played with the reporters covering the trial . . . Jimmy Gleason, after touring through Beverly Hills, Brentwood, Westwood, Bel Air, Englewood and Santa Monica, complained: "Hollywood is just six suburbs in search of a city."

BEFORE Guthrie McClintic went to Russia, Alexander Woollcott advised him to take towels and soap with him, but the producer paid no heed. And so when, on the train from Moscow to Leningrad, McClintic wanted to wash his hands he could find no towel in the washroom. He returned to his seat and searched through the pockets of his coat, which had been thrown into the upper berth where another passenger was sleeping . . . Fumbling through the pockets in the dark, McClintic at last found a suitable piece of paper. Before drying his hands he read it. It was a wire from an agent. The wire read: "Have you any use for Doug Fairbanks, jr.?"

ALDOUS HUXLEY was shown a private screening of "They Shall Have Music," before the picture was released . . . He studied the countless shots of Jascha Heifetz taken from every conceivable angle—close-ups of his fingers, his head, long-shots, angle-shots, sideways, etc. . . . "Have we missed anything?" Huxley was asked . . . "Yes, you've missed a great bet," he suggested. "You forgot to shoot the best angle—Heifetz standing on his head."

'Jubilee of Golden Hits' Marks Loew's New 1939-40 Season

Opening Tomorrow With 'Wizard of Oz' and 'Lady of the Tropics,' New Studio Product Will Bring Brilliant Stars in Noteworthy Vehicles

The Loew Theaters here, the Capitol, Palace and Columbia, are inaugurating their 1939-40 movie season on Friday with a "Jubilee of Golden Hits." This year's celebration is to be a particularly elaborate one, as it also marks moviedom's golden jubilee—50 years of screen progress.

The Loew Jubilee will begin with the premiere at the Palace of "The Wizard of Oz," in Technicolor, and at the Capitol, of "Lady of the Tropics," costarring Hedy LaMarr and Robert Taylor. This will be only the beginning of a succession of attractions that will give Washingtonians one of moviedom's most notable celebrations.

Motion pictures have progressed far beyond the most enthusiastic expectations of Thomas Edison and his staff of inventors who first projected film through their original Kinetoscope back in the fall of 1889. The Loew Jubilee of Golden Hits plans to show just how far this development has reached with an especially planned series of important releases.

The new season announcement from the Capitol, Palace and Columbia Theaters lists a wide variety of important and promising pictures.

"Oz" a Sensational Achievement

Friday will bring to the Palace the most widely heralded picture in recent screen history. This is the amazing "Wizard of Oz." Filmed in Technicolor, it embodies wonders rare to the screen. It is the kind of a motion picture having both adult and juvenile interest, which brings new glories to the screen and is considered an achievement for which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the film industry may well be proud. Judy Garland, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Frank Morgan, Billie Burke and Margaret Hamilton are but few of the important members of the cast of "The Wizard of Oz."

"Blackmail," in which Edward G. Robinson gives one of his outstanding characterizations, is a tense prison drama with a wealth of action. Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey and Gene Lockhart are in support. Also on the September calendar is "The Women." This is an adaptation of the famous stage play by Clare Booth with Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard and Mary Boland heading the cast of 135 women who have nothing on their minds but men. It's a film play with lots of punch, including the greatest hair-pulling contest between women ever brought to the screen.

Others in the Parade

Bob Burns' first starring film, "Our Leading Citizen," which also introduces lovely Susan Heyward in a story filled with the homespun whimsy and Americanism that characterized the attractions in which the late Will Rogers appeared; the Jascha Heifetz picture, "They Shall Have Music," with Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea and Walter Brennan; "Thunder Afloat," a rousing story of the United States Navy, with Wallace Beery and Chester Morris heading a fine array of star talent, and "Hollywood Cavalcade," a Technicolor treat in which the "movies" of an earlier day are satirized by a large group of top-flight stars—all these are other September paraders in the Jubilee of Golden Hits.

The October schedule promises to add luster to the initial array. There will be Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in "Babes in Arms," an adaptation of one of Broadway's most successful musical comedy hits, which already is being hailed as one of the grandest entertainments Hollywood ever has created; America's popular swing favorite, Artie Shaw, will make his debut in M.-G.-M.'s "Dancing Co-Ed," in which red-headed Lana Turner, the screen's new "it" girl, is the heart interest; the Marx Brothers will unleash their furiously funny brand of comedy in. "A Day at the Circus;" Garbo will make her long-awaited return in "Ninotscka," with Melvyn Douglas; Ernest Lubitsch directed.

And Still They Come

Nelson Eddy will be costarred with Ilona Massey—not seen since her memorable debut in "The Great Waltz"—in "Balalaika." Eleanor Powell and Fred Astaire are teamed in another musical, "Broadway Melody of 1940," in which other M.-G.-M. stars will round out the formidable cast always to be found in a "Broadway Melody" show; "Northwest Passage," with Spencer Tracy but one of a long list of important stars, in the filmization of one of the great literary works of the year, "The Rains Came," based on one of the most popular novels of our times, with Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power and George Brent heading a most imposing cast—a story of modern India marked by intense drama, fire, earthquake, flood—these, too, are on the list. One of the most expensive of all screen productions, "Drums Along the Mohawk," another great story based on a great novel with a background of dramatic sweep in which Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda are costarred, will be entirely in Technicolor.

Favorite Stars Reunited

These are by no means all to keep the moviegoer in a high state of interest. Eddie Cantor is making "Girl Crazy," William Powell, fans will be happy to learn, is back at work and is busy on another Thin Man story. This is to be "Another Thin Man," with Myrna Loy opposite, of course. Greer Garson, who scored so completely in "Goodbye Mr. Chips," has been teamed with Robert Taylor in "Remember;" Leslie Howard is to be starred in "Intermezzo—A Story of Stolen Love."

The glorious voices of Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald will be reunited in another rousing musical film; "Gone With the Wind" will be coming along, too, during this Jubilee of Golden Hits; "Swanee River," another Daryl Zanuck Technicolor hit, will deal with the life of Stephan Foster, a great historic figure; John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath," Lawrence Olivier in "Rebecca," an adaption of the most popular of this year's best-sellers—these are others that will make more glorious this Low celebration that seeks fittingly to salute the fiftieth birthday of the motion picture.

With so many pictures already in production and so many completed; with so many great novels having been bought for adaptation to the screen, the 1939-40 season is far ahead of previous years and promises to be one of the most active and fruitful in all the screen's half century of achievement.

Film Comedian Began Ringing Doorbells

Frank Morgan Took Whirl at Salesmanship Before Adopting Stage

Frank Morgan started out in life as a brush salesman, but wearied of ringing doorbells, and decided to follow his brother Ralph's footsteps on the stage. He is currently playing the Wizard in "The Wizard of Oz," opening tomorrow at Loew's Palace theater.

Born in New York City on June 1, 1890, a member of the Wupperman family, of Angostura Bitters fame, Morgan was known as the best boy soprano in the city, singing at St. Thomas' and All Angels' churches. After attending public and private schools he went to Cornell University but abandoned his studies after several years to embark upon a business career.

Tried Newspaper Game

From selling brushes, he went to the Old Boston Traveller to try his hand as an advertising salesman. He also sold real estate and went to Las Vegas, New Mexico, to be a cowpuncher before starting on his theatrical career.

His brother, Ralph, in admiration for A. E. Morgan, a leading actor of that time, had dropped the Wupperman and taken the Morgan name for professional purposes. Frank did likewise when he made his stage debut in a vaudeville sketch written by his friend, Edgar Allan Woolf, now a well known screen writer. He then went into the cast of "Mr. Wu" with Walker Whiteside.

On the New York stage he appeared in such productions as "The Man Who Came Back," "Seventh Heaven," "My Lady Friends," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "Among the Married," "Topaze," "The Firebrand" and the musical comedies and revues, "Band Wagon," Ziegfeld's "Rosalie" and Selwyn's "Rockabye."

In Silent Films

Morgan first appeared on the screen in the silent days with Anita Stewart in "The Girl Phillipa." Later he supported Nancy Carroll in "Laughter," both produced in the East.

Since then he has played in such pictures as "Reunion in Vienna," "Made on Broadway," "When Ladies Meet," "Broadway in Hollywood," "The Nuisance," "The Cat and the Fiddle," "Success at Any Price," "Affairs of Cellini," "Blonde Bombshell," "Best of Enemies," "By Your Leave," "Naughty Marietta," "I Live My Life," "Escapade," "The Perfect Gentleman," "Trouble for Two," 'Sweethearts," and now "The Wizard of Oz."

Many Famous Novels on Way To the Screen

Popular Fictions and Classics Included in Current Announcements

One of the most interesting items in any new movie season announcement is the listing of the well known stories and novels which Hollywood has decided to film.

The 1939-40 season announcement from the Capitol, Palace and Columbia theaters offers a wealth of such information. During the new season, cameras on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot will mirror the highlights from a number of current best-sellers and standard classics.

Kenneth Roberts' "Northwest Passage" is now in production, with Spencer Tracy in the starring role. "The Yearling" by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings also is scheduled for production early in the fall season.

After completing her role in "Ninotschka," it is almost certain that Garbo will be starred in "Madame Curie," based on Eve Curie's biography.

Two Rudyard Kipling novels, "Kim" and "Soldiers Three," likewise are listed in M.-G.-M.'s new season line-up. So are Jules Verne's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" and "Quo Vadis."

Myron Brinig's "May Flavin" and Clyde Fitch's "Beau Brummell" will probably be produced later in the season.

Another novel which has caused considerable stir in cinema circles will undoubtedly be shown during the new season at Loew's but the management won't predict when. It is "Gone With the Wind." The wiseacres of film row predict you'll be seeing it before Christmas.

Mine Memento in Player's Ring

A black-diamond ring is worn by Harry Bellover, who appears with William Powell and Myrna Loy in "Another Thin Man," as a memento of the fact that he got his start in life a thousand feet underground. The black diamond is a bit of coal, polished and set in platinum. Bellover worked for five years as a coal miner at Hillsboro, Ill.

Mickey Rooney has a fan club in Herts, England, which publishes a paper called "Mickey's Movie Monthly."

To Upset An Omen

There is a peculiar poignancy in the fact that the challenge round of the Davis Cup, outstanding symbol of the international fraternity of sport, should be played this year in an atmosphere of mounting international hate. The healthy competition between the United States and Australia, to be run off at Philadelphia this week-end, is wholly overshadowed by the grim preparations which have already converted the whole of Europe into an armed camp.

Moreover there are those who see a gloomy omen in the fact that Australia last took the famous cup from the United States in 1914, just after the last world war flamed out, to which is coupled a widespread belief that the team from down-under will prove too good for America's best this year. That 1914 challenge round was the last Davis Cup match played for five years. During the interim the elimination contests between the nations were not played on grass, nor staged in the pleasant atmosphere of a country club.

It is interesting, also, that while 30 or more nations annually compete for this trophy of good sportsmanship, one or another of four countries has always won it. The winners have been confined to the United States, Great Britain, France and Australia—all democratic nations. And this year either the United States or Australia must win again.

Whichever does so, the struggle will be hard, honorable both to winner and loser, devoid of subsequent acrimony. Naturally the hope is that the odds will be confounded, leaving the symbol of tennis supremacy here. Such outcome, incidentally, would confound the dope of those who point out that Australia last defeated this country in a political atmosphere sadly like that now ruling.

Looking Ahead

Convincing arguments in favor of Federal control over our "energy resources" are presented in the current report of the National Resources Committee. The production and use of mineral fuels, says the committee, have been accompanied by large-scale waste of some of the country's most valuable natural wealth. Conservation measures have become a pressing necessity to avoid a famine of energy in the future.

The detailed findings of the report were contributed by the Energy Resources Committee. Experts have analyzed the problems and needs of the coal, oil-and-gas and water-power industries. In each case they have recommended specific steps to assure the orderly development of these resources in the interests of economic growth and stability as well as national defense. On the basis of these recommendations, the National Resources Committee calls for an integrated national policy concerning all our sources of energy.

In some instances the States are commended for their regulatory efforts. But the committee is undoubtedly right in pointing out the larger problem is one which only the Federal Government can handle. In the bituminous coal industry, for instance, ownership of mines is scattered among a vast number of people in many different States. Each of these individuals, and to a lesser extent each State, is eager to convert his fuel into income. The result is not only overproduction and chaos in the industry but also inexcusable waste.

The inability of the States to cope with this situation has led naturally to Federal legislation. Whether or not the bituminous coal act of 1937 points to a real solution, the committee is doubtless right in concluding that Federal regulation of this industry is here to stay. It is not an emergency that has plagued coal producers. Their need and that of the public is for orderly regulation on a permanent basis by an agency not restricted by State boundaries.

So far as conservation is concerned, oil is a more acute problem than coal. "Our proven oil reserves," says the committee, "have been estimated at 15,000,000,000 barrels, in comparison with 1937 consumption of about 1,250,000,000 barrels."

The recent controversy which led to the shutdown of oil wells in various States indicates the shortcomings of local control over this vital industry. Congress ought to give thoughtful consideration to the committee's request for a Federal oil conservation board that could make rules concerning the production and marketing of petroleum and its products so as to avoid waste and protect the interests of all owners drawing from a common pool.

A still more potent argument advanced for Federal control is the need for coordination of policies affecting all the energy-producing industries. Efficient use of coal and oil resources naturally tie in with the development of water power. The committee believes that we should plan to draw a larger share of our energy from water power and lower grade fuels. In any event, the appeal for a general policy governing energy resources in accord with the national welfare seems to be unassailable.

As the board points out, the achievement of such a policy presents "amazingly complex" problems. Nor are all those problems in the economic and administrative fields. The committee's recommendations also raise intricate constitutional problems which cannot be ignored if lasting progress is to be made. But that only accentuates the need for a legislative approach that will be as adequate and competent as has been the planning work of the committee.

Eight Years Of Warning

Danzig and the Polish Corridor, it must be remembered at this juncture, are merely symbols of the underlying issue which is at stake. It is not to acquire these spots of land that Germany has thrown all of her formidable war machinery into high gear. It is not to preserve the present status of this territory that Great Britain and France are girding for Armageddon.

If the issue were really Danzig and the Corridor it could be negotiated in a way which would guarantee the preservation of Polish independence while granting Germany complete political control over the Free City and wholly unimpeded access to East Prussia. That these claims by Hitler do not constitute the issue is demonstrated by the fact that only when confronted with the probability of a major war has he shown the slightest disposition for any sort of compromise.

Danzig and the Corridor are not the issue. But there is no mystery as to what the issue really is. For eight years it has been steadily developing. For eight years the world has had warning after warning that if civilization does not consolidate its strength to stop ruthless aggression, then this aggression will soon stop civilization. In the cycle of these eight years Danzig and the Corridor are important primarily because they happen to be where the showdown will take place.

On the night of September 18, 1931, Japanese troops seized Mukden and started the conflagration which since then has raged, with steadily rising fury, through three continents. The League of Nations endeavored to stop Japan and failed. Manchuria became a Japanese possession and Italy, encouraged by this portent, invaded Ethiopia. Again the League sought, this time more actively, to restrain aggression. Again the League failed, and with that second failure ceased to exist as an effective aid to peace.

During the conquest of Ethiopia the Nazi government of Germany started upon its present course, by remilitarizing the Rhineland. Far-sighted Frenchmen, anticipating the sequence which would follow, at that time said that a "preventive war" against Germany might in the long run save millions of lives. But the German claim to full sovereignty over its own territory was too persuasive.

There is even now, for those who do not see the picture as a whole, an element of persuasiveness in the German case. With diabolical cleverness the Nazis have throughout exploited in their favor the civilized desire to see justice done. Though now the appeal to reason, having served its purpose, is being dropped.

With German remilitarization, and the collapse of the peace machinery at Geneva, the tempo of aggression increased. Germany and Italy formed the axis and together insured that a friendly government should be installed in Spain. Austria was annexed and the consequent threat to Czecho-Slovakia was made good in a way which shocked England and France from their lethargy. Memel was taken, Hungary brought to heel and Russia brought into line, all to prepare the next victim for slaughter. And at that stage, with Poland stretched upon the block, we stand today.

In view of the record it is obvious that Danzig and the Corridor are themselves unimportant. In view of the record it is obvious that every further seizure is regarded as merely a springboard for additional conquest. In view of the record it is obvious that every concession will mean a further weakening of the forces of civilization, bringing closer the time when they will succumb completely to the policies and practices of streamlined barbarism.

It is of the most vital importance, at this crucial moment, to look back over the record of the past eight years; to realize how the policy of totalitarian conquest has grown from an incident in faraway Mukden to a menace which threatens the very existence of every ideal which has gone into the making of the United States. Given eight years more, with the same trend which has been virtually unchallenged since 1931, and the fancied security of the American continent will have gone with the wind.

Admittedly it is difficult for a sheltered and contented people to believe that civilization can thus crumble around them. It is difficult, even with the inescapable evidence before us, to appreciate that for Great Britain and France the hour of supreme test has struck. It is difficult—our almost criminal neutrality law attests it—to realize that if they go down America will inevitably come next.

It is difficult, but it is imperative, to understand that all this, and more, is symbolized by the crisis which is at last coming to a head, almost by accident, over Danzig.

The Bremen Episode

Officials of the North German Lloyd protested vigorously against the detention of the liner Bremen in New York. Ordered to return to Germany immediately after its arrival, Monday, the big vessel was held in port by order of the Treasury Department and subjected to a meticulous inspection for contraband of war.

The perturbation felt by North German Lloyd officials over the Bremen's detention is understandable. Aside from the expense involved, there is the probability that if an armed conflict breaks out soon in Europe, the Bremen will be intercepted by British or French warships somewhere en route and made a prize of war. It is not forgotten that some of the largest German merchant vessels were caught off base and confiscated by enemy powers just 25 years ago.

But it is this very possibility of war that gives justification for the detention of the Bremen and other foreign ships in American ports. This country is under moral and legal obligation not to permit its harbors to be used as outfitting points for commerce raiders. The inspection of the Bremen finally convinced the authorities that this great ocean liner was not equipped for privateering. This could not be assumed, however.

The Bremen episode is a foretaste of the heavy responsibilities that devolve upon a neutral nation determined to safeguard its essential interests. In this instance a wholly legitimate official desire to prevent privateering was responsible for considerable inconvenience and some potential danger to a German vessel. But this inconvenience and danger was merely a by-product of the far greater inconveniences and danger produced for the world by the policies of the German government.

Is it far-fetched to surmise that in the Bremen's detention there was a timely reminder of this fact?

Henry S. Pritchett

Dr. Henry S. Pritchett was a man who left an indelible mark on American education. Yet his name is not identified with any special system of teaching nor any one startling reform. He was no doctrinaire, no revolutionary, only a very intelligent and wholly honest man who insisted on viewing the educational world with complete realism and speaking his mind about it with the utmost candor.

When Dr. Pritchett became the first president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, in 1906, he could already look back on a distinguished career. A mathematician and astronomer of outstanding ability, he had also rendered very notable service as superintendent of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey from 1897 to 1900, and during the six following years as president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. Pritchett will best be remembered, however, for his labors in connection with the Carnegie Foundation. The reports and studies made under his direction held the mirror up to educational practices. The reflection was not always flattering. Colleges and universities that tended to confuse size with importance, outward success with real accomplishments, financial expansion with educational advance, did not always take kindly to Dr. Pritchett's strictures.

But the educational world generally realized their truth and benefited by them. Teachers and administrators realized that Dr. Pritchett never played favorites, rode no hobbies and was solely interested in helping our educational institutions to lay off ballyhoo and do their job. In preparing higher education for the period of deflation it now confronts, his was a most wholesome influence.

Walden Pond, 1939

E. B. White in Harpers.

On the eastern side of the pond, where the highway borders it, the State has built dressing rooms for swimmers, a float with diving towers, drinking fountains of porcelain, and rowboats for hire. The pond is in fact a State preserve, and carries a $20 fine for picking wild flowers, a decree signed in all solemnity by . . . . Walter C. Wardwell, Erson B. Barlow, and Nathaniel I. Bowditch. There was a smell of creosote where they had been building a wide wooden stairway to the road and the parking area. Swimmers and boaters were arriving; bodies splashed vigorously into the water and emerged wet and beautiful in the bright air. As I left, a boatload of town boys were splashing about in mid-pond, kidding and fooling, the young fellows singing at the tops of their lungs in a wild chorus:

Amer-ica, A-mer-i-ca,
God shed His grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood

Viewpoint On Spain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Phillip Bonosky, in his letter to The Post of August 8, obviously has a sickle to grind for Stalin and I wonder that The Post dignified his "questionnaire' by publication. I doubt that he is a victim of misinformation only—anyone who reads and observes knows the real issue in the recent war in Spain. His letter, rather, reflects the bland ignoring of facts typical of the Communist propagandist.

The true Spaniards, under Franco, "were fighting a war of democratic liberation" from the yoke of Moscow. Franco now is faced with the task, and a Herculean one it is, of restoring for these true Spaniards their homeland, gutted and blackened by the Red foe. Though he is a soldier and his primary task is successfully accomplished, he has been drafted to see Spain through her painful reconstruction and I doubt if any Spaniard's labor to rebuild his Spain will be "enforced."

Why should an issue be made of Franco's use of German and Italian planes? The use of any successful antidote to combat poison is warranted surely. Weren't the loyalists armed, supplied and operated by Moscow?

As to the insinuation that Franco might become a stooge for Hitler and Mussolini, he has refuted this by his actions. The "isms" of Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin are irreconcilable with the ideals for which he fought.

A Communist party could not gain seats in Congress "through democratic elections." Democracy and communism are irreconcilable, mainly because the first guarantees spiritual freedom; the other presupposes atheism and enforces it.

The "executions" in Spain are not more deplorable than the unprecedented barbarity of the murders of noncombatants, including clergy, chargeable to the loyalists.

Franco's Moors, who played a major part in freeing Spain, were Catholics—a conspicuous part of their fighting array wore emblems of the Virgin Mary.

Rat Trouble

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Your correspondent, G. F. F., presents a good idea, but the real difficulty with the garbage situation is the use of cheap galvanized iron cans, above ground, often in a sad state of disrepair, and subject always to the raids of marauding cats, which open the way for hosts of rats.

Unless the rat menace is effectually curbed, as by requiring the use of underground garbage cans with heavy cast iron lids, as I understand is done by municipal ordinance in many progressive cities, serious consequences may result. The rat population here is enormous.

Never, except in Paris, France, have I seen such quantities of rats as nightly infest our streets and alleys, and when they die they lie around till the forces of nature cause their ultimate disintegration. Why not try to clean them out in the only feasible way, by restricting their food supply?

HORACE M. BAXTER.
Washington, Aug. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: G. F. F.'s suggestions of using paper bags as a vehicle for transporting garbage from the sink to the garbage pail is not only a step toward city wide sanitation but, what is more heartening, in him we find a person who considers the man who collects our garbage! Could we who are served be more kindly mindful of these public servants, they would happily find more dignity and self respect in the performance of their very necessary duties.

Kahlil Gibran in his "Sand and Foam" writes: "You owe more than gold to him who serves you. Give him of your heart—or serve him."

Wages And Hours

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If we could only get gentlemen authorized to make laws, to realize that the curse of this Nation today is class legislation—a departure from the spirit and letter of the government our forefathers established! Laws are no longer of the people, by the people, for the people but of a class, by a class, for a class. Our Declaration of Independence, Bill of Rights, Constitution were intended to do away with the classes of Europe and make all men equal before the law.

Agriculture is being utterly ruined by the continuance of class legislation, all discriminating against the farmer. Laws that undertake to fix values for a class should be considered as to their effect on other classes, or in other words for the general welfare of the whole people. Make it 32½ cents an hour for good, bad or indifferent boys and girls, men and women and you strike another stunning blow at the farmers of the Nation, who year by year have been forced into bankruptcy, even as high as 18 per cent of their entire number. Farmers have been greatly crippled by the loss and dissatisfaction of their workers by the short hours and high wages of others, some find it impossible to save their crops.

Consider, please, that at 32½ cents an hour a boy can buy with one day's work 9½ bushels of the farmer's oats, or 4 bushels of wheat, or 6 bushels of corn, or 36 pounds of the farmer's fat bacon! Some sales this year show greater amounts even than these. Such a law as that is simply iniquitous. It may secure some industrial votes, but it should occasion the loss of the votes of all the farmers of the Nation.

SAMUEL B. WOODS.
Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 24.

"You All"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Friends, Yankees, countrymen, you all lend me your ears. If the expression "you all" was good enough for William Shakespeare, whose usage of it has been accepted for 300 years, it is good enough for us Southerners. Quote (Marc Antony at the bier of Julius Caesar): "You all did see that on the Lupercal I thrice presented him a kingly crown, which he did thrice refuse."

Also from the same verse: "You all once did love him, not without cause. What cause withholds you then to mourn for him?"

Babe In The Woods

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What assurance can you give us, after the Russian flip-flop, that the European nations will not see their way clear to end their differences on a happy note by simply combining and hopping all over your dear old Uncle Sam?

After all, your Uncle is the world's richest old fellow, with all the gold and the key to two great continents, and a good deal of a babe in the woods, at that. In the words of the immortal Shelley, "What is all this double-crossing worth, if thou double-cross not me?" I'd hate to make them the suggestion! OBSERVER.

Suggestion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the statement of Hugh Barclay Rich in The Post of the 28th instant, that:

"Dreams have no import beyond their physiological implications. If you precipitate a state of disorder in your alimentary canal you will experience these discomforts in astonishing variety." And his further remarks thereon. I would suggest that he read "An Experiment in Time," a small volume by J. W. Dunne. PRESLY HOLLIDAY.

Ingenious Explanation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post has devoted much space in publishing communications congratulating it on its political sagacity in foretelling a union of Germany and Russia. Would the editor of The Post be willing to publish the other side of the story?

Much has been written of Russia's desertion of Poland. This has no basis in fact. Poland has always insisted that she wanted no aid from the Soviets. She has refused to allow Russian troops on her soil to stop effectively a German attack. The Soviets have pointed out that the nonaggression pact would in no way prevent the selling of arms and war materials to Poland as that is merely a matter of commerce. Poland has never asked any more from her neighbor.

The Soviet Union signed a pact with Nazi Germany for obvious reasons. In the first place, Chamberlain and Daladier at Munich gave Czecho-Slovakia to Hitler in accordance with a preconceived plan, so that Germany would move toward the east and a hostile Germany would face a hostile Russia. Secondly, the tri-power negotiations at Moscow had been dragging on for over four months, with England and France still refusing Russia the guarantees she felt were vitally needed. Is it not apparent that Chamberlain and Daladier had no intentions of signing an effective pact but were merely using dilatory tactics to bargain with and appease Germany?

Appeasement in the Polish issue would mean that by some diplomatic maneuver the Anglo-French combination would hand Danzig and the Corridor over to Hitler. This, of course, would mean a German protectorate over Poland. Poland would then be, in effect, incorporated into the Reich as was the fate of the Czechs. A hostile Germany would be brought face to face with a hostile Russia and in the ensuing conflict both countries would cancel each other.

The Soviet Union, however, was not to be outdone. Seeing the nefarious intent of the so-called democracies it completely disrupted their plan by signing a nonaggression pact with Germany. This pact in the eyes of the Soviets means that no longer can dictators Chamberlain and Daladier connive to drive Hitler eastward. The Soviets are given a free hand to eliminate the Japanese menace in the East. Hitler has a free hand in the West.

Moreover, the Soviet move forces the hand of Britain and its ally. They must support Poland. If they don't and instead try appeasement the result will be Poland's annexation by the Reich. However, in that case, a friendly Germany would face a friendly Russia. The annexation of Poland would strengthen Germany for its next move against the French and British empires.

Thus Chamberlain has been forced to take a positive stand. A second Munich is no longer possible.

The Post Impressionist

Brunt Of Battle

No one supposes the German people want war more than anyone else, but is is hard to understand how those who make war are deaf to their voices. They seemed to me to cry out so clearly that even an American tourist, and a very young one at that, could not mistake their meaning and their strength and their number.

There was the young Viennese whom we found in our compartment on the train when we came back from the dining car after lunch. When I saw him occupying the only seat not covered with our coats and bags I said, "Look what the cat drug in," and thought his smile was merely a greeting.

Before we got to Dresden it appeared that he spoke perfect English, but if he took my remark amiss he never showed it.

He told us that of his graduating class of 36 young men, only 3 were still alive. He himself escaped the campaign on the Russian front with nothing more than stomach ulcers; but even so, the doctors gave him only a few more years to live. He was a captain of cavalry and once was in the saddle for 72 hours at a stretch.

"If another war comes," he said, "I won't go. They can line me up against a wall and shoot me first." He was an Austrian and a liberal and they probably did, even though the war was not the kind he anticipated.

Outside our room in the little Hotel Zum Einsiedler, in Potsdam, there was a street through which 16 men in the German army used to march each day, from the Kasern a couple of blocks away. This was in 1925, and never was there a more pathetic or bedraggled brace of squads than those. They carried no guns and presumably were engaged in some sort of public works project.

Their uniforms were threadbare, devoid of medals or ornaments of color, shoddy and shabby and baggy at the knees, remnants of the pitiful clothing made during the last months of the war by a nation whose textile—ersatz—was an indication of the efficacy of the British blockade.

But well as I can remember that little army, a clearer picture is in my mind. It was of a man who used to stand on the curb and listen to the tramping feet each morning. By his build and carriage and hair I guessed he was just a few years older than the youngsters who marched by him, but there was no clew to his age in his face. There was, in fact, nothing that really could be called a face. He carried a cane painted white and held a leash clipped to the collar of the first "Seeing Eye" dog I can remember.

The World War Memorial in Munich to my mind is the most impressive in the world. One enters it by going down a few steps, to a rectangular space below the surface of the park. It is something like a large empty swimming pool. In all four of its walls are carved the names of the Bavarian soldiers who fell in battle. I believe there were 12,000 or 13,000 names there, a great number to see written out all in one place.

One day—it was a bright sunny day in summer and the anniversary of no particular battle, as far as I know—I saw an old man stand for minutes on end before one spot on the wall. He was tall and slender and tried to hold himself erect, but there was a droop to the head which sent his chin far down over the high German collar he wore, so that it almost hid the little nub of the four-in-hand knot to his tie, tucked in at the very bottom of the white starched collar.

He stood there, without moving, for a very long time. Then he knelt down and tenderly placed a little bouquet of garden flowers on the concrete floor at the bottom of a column of names. Afterwards he slowly turned and climbed the few steps up into the park.

I used to walk in the woods behind the great red Heidelberg Castle with a cousin of mine, who liked to throw his arm over my shoulder because the weight of it tired him. He had had three operations on it since that morning in 1916 when it stopped a bullet.

My cousin's English was very good, since he had been interned in England, and finally he told me how it happened. He and four others were several yards away from their company in a special patrolling position when the advance came over and cut them off. They hid in a shell hole all day and when evening came realized they were surrounded by the British. An English soldier, on mopping-up duty, came along and they stepped out, unarmed, with their hands in the air. The Tommie, who my cousin thinks was drunk, shot them all, however, and killed three of them. The other two pretended to be dead and lay on the field that night and the next day, until the English picked them up and sent them to a prison hospital.

After the war, when he was released, my cousin was awarded the Iron Cross. I admired it and he wanted to give it to me. I refused to take it.

"What can it ever mean to me!" he said. ALFRED FRIENDLY.

Confusion Sets In

THE EARTH-SHAKING or hell-raising developments of the last week prompt the disquieting thought that the whole world is crazy or that, at the very best, the nations thereof are as flighty, inconsistent and shallow as any sewing circle. Naturally, Americans pursed their lips and blew a vulgar note at the Nazis and Bolos when those two cats made up their quarrel and thereby confirmed the old contention that all that either one had ever said of the other not only was true but wasn't the half of it.

But then it became apparent that by falling in with Stalin, Hitler automatically fell out with Japan, and that has made or will make a difference to the British, and, no doubt, to the U. S. A. Already the Japanese have desisted from their crude custom of stripping the pants off purplish English civilians of both sexes and have taken to tearing down the detestable swastika which once so fondly they hailed. It is not unlikely that the Japanese soldiers will presently start divesting the Germans to the racous amusement of the scratchy classes.

And the Japanese nation, by the simple act of tossing out one cabinet and selecting a moderate soldier, have repudiated their policy of stealing the British pants and are now proceeding on a program of conciliation and understanding with the British and us. It would seem unthinkable, if we didn't know enough about nations to know that it can be true, that Britain ever could forgive the humiliation that was done her by the irresponsible, of course, acts of the Japanese sergeants. But, remembering that nations and peoples easily forgive and forget episodes in which they slay one another by the hundreds of thousands, one must admit that the regrettable affairs of the English men's and ladies' pants is no permanent bar to a healthy and mutually respectful understanding.

Japanese Mind Faces Renovation

THE RETIRING PRIME minister of Japan said merely and blandly that in view of the perfidious deal between Hitler and Stalin the Japanese government must abandon its old policy, create a new one based on new ideas, and renovate the public mind. In simpler words, he found that he had been taking liberties with the wrong britches—a revisionof eternal truth which doubtless will be followed by a declaration from Berlin that the Japanese are not Oriental Aryans, after all, but Oriental Jews, as witness the name of their new Prime minister, Nobuyuki Abe.

It was only within the last year or two that the docile Boche, already stupefied by much learning that warred with his knowledge and sense, was informed of the eternal truth that the Japanese were Oriental Aryans. But eternity itself is in the creation and gift of the greasy corporal, and he that giveth also taketh away. And not long before that the Boche had learned that the Italians were an inferior order of cattle because, Der Fuehrer said, persons having short legs, dark complexions and hooked noses—a good police description of the Italian King-Emperor—were non-Aryan and likely either Jewish or a wee bit colored. This he had to unlearn between one edition and another of the Beobachter. An eternal truth shot to hell is a finger-snap when Hitler and the Duce made their deal and Mussolini made long-legged, fair-haired, blue-eyed Aryans of his Neapolitans and Sicilianos by a simple fiat of his inflexible will.

Ludicrous Antics, And Discomfort

LUDICROUS INDEED are the antics, mental and military, of the faceless peoples of the earth, but given a brief lapse of time and a turn of politics and war the Americans might yet come to view with alarm a China militarized and organized by the Soviet and turned against the dirty American capitalistic exploiters. In that case the American Nation, too, might enact a change of policy friendly to Japan and the American mind be sent to the cleaners for renovation.

The discomfort of the French and American Bolos is no less a delight than that of the Nazified French and Americans, who are few in number and short on sense. The Bolos claim Stalin did nothing wrong, but blame Britain and France for forcing him to do it, as though the superman of the superstate needed forcing to do the right thing. And the Nazis aren't on speaking terms with themselves, because obviously it were treason to the Reich to have any doings whatever with persons having doings with Russian bolshevism, which plainly includes them.

Lest we be unduly pleased by their anguish, however, and by our own consistent purity, we may imagine what satisfaction would have warmed our own hypocritical little soul had the Soviet made this deal with the allies instead of with Hitler. At this point confusion sets in.

Moose Drop Title 'Dictator'

Philadelphia, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Loyal Order of Moose dropped the word, "dictator," from its rituals and titles today, saying world events have brought the term "into disrepute."

Delegates to the organization's fifty-first annual convention voted unanimously to abandon the word and designate the heads of lodges and high elective officers as governors.

Fred W. Sabel, Aurora, Ill., banker, was elected first supreme governor. Among members of the supreme council elected was William Pittenger, United States Representative from Duluth, Minn.

Today And Tomorrow

Russian Pact, Ends Hitler's Strategical Plan

successful; Britain and France had lost all their allies in Europe and they were threatened with simultaneous attack in Europe, in the Mediterranean, and in Asia. A few months ago the position was such that the anti-Comintern partners could look forward to a time when Britain and France would be so weakened by their strategic losses in central Europe, in Spain, in the Moslem world, and in the Orient, that they could be forced without war to surrender their position as great powers, and to agree to a new order of things in the world arranged by the dictation of Hitler and his partners.

This was the plan of campaign until the spring and summer of this year. The collapse and failure of this plan has forced Hitler to alter quickly and radically his whole strategy in diplomacy and in war.

The turning point was, it now appears, November of last year. The French, threatened by the general strike and by financial chaos at home, and by Italian demonstrations against Tunis, Corsica, and Savoy, suddenly pulled themselves together and achieved an extraordinarily impressive moral, political and economic recovery. This was followed by British rearmament on a really great scale and by a clarification of the British mind after Hitler's seizure of Prague and Mussolini's seizure of Albania. The effect of the restoration of Anglo-French power revolutionized the diplomatic position in Europe.

As France and Britain gathered strength, they recruited allies. For small states can join only the stronger powers. They won Poland, which was on the other side at Munich; they kept Rumania from submitting to Germany; they have probably prevented Jugoslavia and perhaps even Hungary from capitulating; they have won Greece and Turkey; they have made it necessary for Spain, and possible for Gen. Franco, to be neutral; they have kept Portugal within their system; they have arrested and probably reversed the movement in the Moslem world from Morocco to Arabia.

Italy Becomes Military Liability

THE NET RESULT of these Anglo-French successes has been to make Italy a military liability rather than an asset for Germany. With Spain neutral, Jugoslavia doubtful, Turkey and Greece in the other camp, and the Moslems neutral and probably loyal to France, Italy is in mortal peril. Italy is virtually an island lying in a sea where the Anglo-French alliance has a preponderance of three, and probably four, to one. With the Germans fighting a war on two fronts, at least until they have conquered Poland, Italy has faced, perhaps still faces, a devastating attack.

The one hope for Italy was Japan. If Japan could draw the fire of the British to the Far East, Italy might have hoped to survive until the Germans were free to send help. The Japanese attack on Britain in the Far East was, therefore, of critical importance. But it failed. For the British were shrewd enough not to let themselves be distracted by the maneuvers. They endured the humiliation and the losses. Then at the critical moment, the United States, with the approval of both political parties, intervened by threatening Japan with an embargo.

The effect of that action was greater than was generally understood at the time. The United States is too strong for Japan. This made certain that Britain could keep her naval forces concentrated against Italy. This made Italy a great liability for Hitler both in a military sense and psychologically. For what good would it do him to conquer Poland if at the same time Fascist Italy were conquered? What could be gained by crushing the Polish army if he had then to defend a new military frontier somewhere in Italy, perhaps even on the Austrian and Jugoslav border?

Anti-Comintern Pact Of No Further Use

WITH SPAIN neutral, Japan checked in Asia, Italy in jeopardy, the anti-Comintern pact was of no further use to Hitler. He had to turn to Soviet Russia. With Russia against him he was isolated and certain to be starved into submission. With Russia on his side, or even as a neutral upon whom he could draw for supplies, he can hope to withstand for a long time, conceivably forever, the British blockade.

Though Hitler is still capable of taking the offensive locally in central Europe, in the larger view he is, for war or for peace, on the defensive. Unless by some mighty stroke he can crush the Anglo-French power, a thing which is possible but not probable, his position is much like that of Napoleon after Trafalgar. That is to say, he may be able to win battles and even campaigns but the chances are greatly against his being able to win the war. For in a long struggle landlocked powers like Germany and Russia have never yet been able to outlast the powers that control the seas.

The Napoleonic experience reminds us that a struggle of this kind, whether it be by war or by warlike diplomacy, is likely to last a long time. What we are witnessing is a struggle between land power and sea power. The center of Hitler's power is the German army. The center of the allied power is the British navy with its essential support in the French army. Neither can quickly defeat the other. Neither can strike directly at the other. Therefore the war or the diplomatic struggle is almost certain to be a long one.

In the war or in the diplomatic struggle the two main protagonists will remain the Anglo-French on the one side, the Germans on the other. Their allies will probably not all remain fixed in one coalition or the other. Russia has already changed sides once. In the Napoleonic wars she changed twice. Japan has probably changed. Sooner or later Italy will change or be forced to change.

IN THE NAPOLEONIC wars, which lasted from 1793 to 1815, there were seven coalitions. Britain was in all of them except the first. Russia was against Napoleon in the first four, more or less on his side in the fifth, and against him in the sixth and seventh. The fighting was not continuous. Seven treaties of peace were made and signed in the course of these wars, at Campo Formio in 1797, at Amiens in 1802, at Presbourg in 1805, at Tilsit in 1807, at Vienna in 1809, at Paris in 1814, at Vienna in 1815. Only the seventh treaty really marked the end of the struggle. Each of the others was only an armistice like Munich. For a struggle of this sort, in which the issue is the mastery of the Old World, can never end finally except by the complete defeat of one side or the other.

Everything we know of the situation today agrees with what history teaches us, that this is not the crisis of a few months, or even of a few years, but of a generation. Realizing that, it is the part of wisdom for Americans to take advantage of their relative security—to form their own policy very deliberately, to refuse to be confused by incidents, and to prepare very carefully and very thoroughly before taking any critical decision. Our security lies in being effective, not in being excited or hurried, in starting nothing that we are not prepared to finish, in acting only when the whole force of a united people is behind the policy of Government. For in this long struggle which began some years ago and will probably continue for years to come, a people which is so fortunate that it can act deliberately would be a fool to act hastily.

Manufacturers Pay $12,848,273 To 8,714 Here

Washington manufacturers in 1937 employed a total of 8,714 workers who drew annual wages amounting to $12,848,273, according to a census of manufacturers for that year released yesterday by the Department of Commerce.

In a breakdown of wage earners and their salaries according to the size of establishments, the report stated that concerns with output valued between $5,000 and $20,000 employed 292 workers who were paid $322,516.

A total of 627 employes earned $734,984 in establishments whose products were valued between $20,000 and $50,000, the report said. Concerns with an estimated output between $50,000 and $100,000, employed 834 workers and they drew $1,081,234 in annual salaries.

In the higher brackets, manufacturers in the District who operated establishments with products valued from $100,000 to $2,500,000 employed a total of 6,961 workers who annually earned $10,709,539, it was reported.

Nursery School And Home for Aged Protested

Protests against establishment of a nursery school and a church home for old ladies in residential areas were voiced by property owners yesterday at hearings before the board of zoning adjustment.

M. Frances Burns asked for a permit to establish a school at 4616 Verplanck place northwest, in behalf of the Green Acres School, Inc.

A petition signed by 40 property owners was filed in protest.

Earlier the board heard objections to a request that a building at 1500 Farragut street be converted into a church home for old ladies. The application for rezoning was made by Sallie H. Weller, owner of the property, who said the home would be under auspices of the Lutheran Church.

U. S. Loans Urged For Network of Super-Highways

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Murray D. Van Wagoner, Michigan highway commissioner and president of the American Road Builders Association, today advocated long-time Government loans to finance the proposed super-highway system for the Nation.

"The financial solution of our enormous traffic problem is not through direct Federal grants for the purchase of rights-of-way and construction," he asserted in an interview. "What we must do is to borrow a lot of money for a long time at low interest rates. The term of the loans could run from 30 to 40 years.

"A national super-highway" network would be made up of correlated interregional highways. The parts would not be fitted together at one time, but over a considerable period."

Americas' Experts To Seek Close Ties

The Pan American Union announced yesterday that financial experts from the 21 American republics will meet at Guatemala City November 13, to discuss the possibility of closer inter-American cooperation in monetary, foreign exchange, and bank policies.

The meeting is considered of great importance in Administration quarters, in that closer economic and financial ties between the American republics will do much to dispel concern over totalitarian penetration.

Oklahoma Cuts Oil Production

Oklahoma City, Aug. 30 (AP).—Oklahoma whittled its daily crude oil production allowable 43,050 barrels today and Texas prepared to follow suit with a 175,000-barrel slash as the six-State oil field shutdown neared a close.

The production holiday followed a wave of price cutting by major purchasing companies, which restored prices yesterday.

Neutrality Friction

By Mark Sullivan

Co-operation Needed

ON TUESDAY morning Mr. Walter Lippmann printed a suggestion for action by America in view of the crisis in Europe. Mr. Lippmann, habitually restrained in language, described the need as "immediate, urgent and paramount." Those words, in the judgment of the writer of this column, are not too strong.

Mr. Lippmann's suggestion was that President Roosevelt act "to win the support of Congress at once. This means that leading members of Congress should at once be called in to share in the responsibility of making decisions . . . There should be Republicans and dissenting Democrats among them. And they should be selected, not because Mr. Roosevelt likes them or agrees with them, but because they are backed by a considerable group in Congress and in the country . . . These men should meet, not occasionally, but every day, if necessary all day, as a council of national defense."

That appeared Tuesday morning. Tuesday afternoon Mr. Roosevelt had a press conference. Someone asked him a question, about a charge, first made by himself several weeks ago and recently repeated by a member of his Administration. The charge was that failure of the Senate to give Mr. Roosevelt the neutrality measure he asked had been a contributing factor in causing the present crisis in Europe.

This charge Mr. Roosevelt now repeated, in a spirit of "I told you so." He said everybody now knows the charge to be true. He put the blame on the Republicans in the Senate together with a minority of Democrats.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S repetition of this charge, in the midst of the crisis, was certain to cause acrimony. Three hours after Mr. Roosevelt spoke, Republican Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, was on the radio. Stiffly he declared that he was one of the Senators who resisted giving Mr. Roosevelt the neutrality measure he asked—and that he would continue to resist. Within an hour more radio commentators were describing Senator Bridges' defiance.

Thus is friction started. Thus is factionalism perpetuated and deepened. Thus is tragedy brought nearer. Thus, even after impending catastrophe is recognized—thus, instead of averting it do we hasten toward it.

I have never watched an hourglass closely. But I wonder if, toward the end, when the sand in the upper compartment is loose—if the grains do not flow more rapidly as the final minute approaches.

In the charge Mr. Roosevelt makes, he is probably right. The neutrality bill he asked Congress to pass would have permitted Britain to buy war munitions in America. (It would have permitted any nation that has ships to carry the munitions home, but only Britain and France have the ships.) If Hitler knew that Britain could get unlimited munitions from America, possibly Hitler might have been deterred from creating the crisis.

But to say this is much short of saying all. If we were carefully apportioning blames, we should go back and consider the reasons why Congress (not the Senate alone) refused to pass Mr. Roosevelt's neutrality measure.

The whole of Mr. Roosevelt's program to meet foreign developments consisted of two parts. The first part was armed preparedness by the United States. The other part was the neutrality measure.

WHEN THE PREPAREDNESS part of Mr. Roosevelt's program came before Congress, the Republicans in the House took an unusual step. Republican leader Joseph W. Martin appointed a committee of 12, headed by Congressman Wadsworth, of New York, to consider what the Republican attitude on preparedness should be. The committee held long discussions, with Army and Navy officers, civilian experts, outstanding leaders of thought.

In the end, this Republican committee concluded that Mr. Roosevelt's preparedness measure should be supported. The committee so recommended to a conference of the whole Republican membership of the House. As a result, the preparedness measure passed Congress almost unanimously. In the House, the vote was 367 to 15; in the Senate, 77 to 8—and of the 8 opposing, only 4 were Republicans.

That was Mr. Roosevelt's preparedness measure. But when, three months later, his neutrality measure came up, it was rejected, in the House by 199 to 187; in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by 12 to 11, adverse majorities of 2 and 1.

For the change in the attitude of Congress, there are reasons too many to enumerate here. Some of the reasons were not on Mr. Roosevelt's shoulders. But some were.

But enough about past blames. The immediate, urgent, paramount need is co-operation between President and Congress, in the way Mr. Lippmann suggests.

The Basic Issue

By Barnet Nover

Danzig Far More Than A Symbol

IT USED to be assumed that the alternative to war is peace. That simple either-or is now wholly misleading. Peace is today only one of two alternatives to war. The other is the absence of armed conflict, i. e., the continuation of the present state of permanent mobilization and unending tensions.

The distinction it is now necessary to draw between peace and the absence of war is of vital importance. Without it the real significance of the Danzig question cannot be understood. For what is now done with regard to Danzig will determine whether Europe is to be plunged into war, whether real peace will be assured that unhappy continent or whether the world will be vouchsafed only an uneasy respite of the kind which followed the Munich settlement with war ultimately more certain than ever.

IN HIS LETTER to Premier Daladier, Chancellor Hitler demanded the return to Germany of Danzig and the Corridor. Were this done, Europe would undoubtedly be given a breathing spell of greater or lesser duration. But the satisfaction of Hitler's immediate demands would not and could not lead to peace.

Why? The answer is to be found in Hitler's reasons for wanting Danzig and the Corridor. He says he wants them because they were German in the past and must be German again. But Alsace and Lorraine were German in the past and South Tyrol was an Austrian province. Yet Hitler has renounced Germany's claims to those areas even as, in 1934, he agreed to do nothing for ten years to modify the status quo in Danzig and the Corridor.

HITLER wants Danzig and the Corridor because without them Poland would be reduced to the status of Czecho-Slovakia after Munich. With Danzig and the Corridor in German hands, Poland's independence would rest on the tenuous thread of Nazi willingness to permit her to remain independent. In other words, Poland's position would be that of Lithuania or Slovakia.

Lithuania is still, so to speak, independent. But Germany is in a position to strangle that little nation any time it suits her purpose to do so. Slovakia's independence is no longer even nominal. And neither Lithuania nor Slovakia is in a position to pursue an independent policy. Nor would Poland enjoy any kind of a free hand were Germany entrenched in Danzig and the Corridor.

THE REASON why this is so is that with Germany in control of Danzig, Poland's outlet to the sea would depend on Germany's by-your-leave, thus Poland's economic life would forever be at the mercy of the Third Reich. As a consequence, Poland would have no choice but to follow Germany's lead and direction in her foreign policy and her dictation in domestic affairs.

With Poland gone, the last barrier to German domination of eastern and southeastern Europe would be destroyed and Germany's strength vis-a-vis Great Britain and France would be enormously increased. And that would be even more true if certain implications of the Russo-German pact are borne out.

WHEN HITLER talks about Germany's determination to regain Danzig, therefore, he is looking far beyond needs of prestige, far beyond any sentimental desire to regain a territory which is 95 per cent German in population. He is playing for vastly greater stakes. On the other hand the Poles see with equal clarity that Danzig is their Maginot line, the sine qua non of continued independence.

The question then arises: To what degree is it possible to compromise the conflicting German and Polish viewpoints on the Danzig issue? The answer is to a very slight degree, indeed.

POLAND is not and never has interfered with the informal governance of the Free City. Danzig has been completely Nazified. It is wholly governed from Berlin. But as long as it remains unfortified and as long as it continues to be linked with Poland by a customs union, Poland, assured of British and French support, is reasonably safe.

Everything would change if, in one form or another, Germany were put in a position legally or illegally, openly or secretly, to transform Danzig into a German military, naval and air base. The moment that were done the Corridor would be untenable and Poland would find herself utterly at the mercy of Berlin.

IN HIS EXCHANGE of notes with Herr Hitler last spring, Col. Beck offered certain adjustments of the Danzig situation to meet German wishes. It is possible that some slight adjustments can be made without endangering Poland's basic requirements in the Free City.

But these concessions cannot be great. For Poland cannot afford to have the parable of the camel and the Arab's tent repeated in Danzig and the Corridor. In view of Hitler's record of persistent bad faith the Polish leaders cannot afford to assume for a moment that any promise of good behavior by the Third Reich will be lived up to any longer than Hitler deems necessary. Nor can Great Britain and France afford to press Poland beyond the safety point.

Even seemingly innocent concessions now may prove the prelude to unavoidable capitulation later, which is precisely why the present crisis has been taking a different course from that which led to the Munich settlement. For while Poland has the example of Czecho-Slovakia before her, the statesmen in London and Paris realize only too well that Munich did not bring peace but only postponement of disaster.

Alhambra Van Arrives to Open Convention Today

First arrivals for the Order of the Alhambra convention checked in at the Willard Hotel yesterday, including Supreme Commander John Miller and Supreme Secretary William F. Boyle. The convention will open at 9:30 a. m. today with a mass at St. Patrick's Church, followed by the first business session at the Willard Hotel.

An open-air party will be held this afternoon at Fort Hunt, and the oasis will be opened this evening in the small ballroom of the hotel. A trip to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and Mount Vernon tomorrow afternoon will come between morning and afternoon business sessions. A dance will be held in the evening in the ballroom.

Gov. O'Conor of Maryland will be guest speaker at the final banquet Saturday evening, at which James E. Colliflower will be toastmaster. On Sunday delegates will go to Forest Glen, Md., to join with Alcala Caravan in unveiling a monument to Archbishop Carroll, first archbishop of Baltimore.

War Crisis

"Do you suffer from dry scalp? . . . Is your hair brittle and lusterless? . . . Do you find particles of dandruff on your coat lapel? . . . These are the questions which the British Parliament must answer at its grave session tonight . . . Kindly stand by for an important bulletin . . . Mrs. Harold Dinsmore, of 1876 Boulevard, Jersey City, says yeast has made her a new woman . . . Nevertheless, there is a feeling that this is not enough to delay the zero hour much longer.

"In just a moment you will hear the voice of Dudley Wilkes, famed correspondent, talking from Berlin . . . Hello, radio friends . . . One of my letters asks that I state whether annuals can be grown successfully where there is not much shade. Ordinarily, I would say, the sun is necessary, especially for petunias, phlox, larkspur and . . . the Polish Corridor, Esthonia and perhaps Rumania . . . Ladies and gentlemen, we take time out from this organ recital now to read you a statement by Neville Chamberlain in the House of Commons a few moments ago . . . Mr. Chamberlain says . . . For ten years I felt low in energy, easily tired and quite depressed; I heard about Boffell Tablets and have not known a tired moment since . . . You, too, my friends, can get . . . a fresh international crisis of the gravest order . . . by inclosing 10 cents in stamps and writing Dr. Gwoff, at this station . . . "Following the rendition of 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy' . . . direct from the British Cabinet meeting . . . you will hear Miss Lillian Geist, of Hackensack . . . issue an order directing the entire Italian navy to proceed at once to . . . order a box of Zuffer's Liver Pills before it is too late . . . As if this were not sufficiently alarming, Field Marshal Goering leaped into one of the new supertanks and . . . won $5 for answering all three questions correctly . . . This leaves the score Brooklyn, 6; Cincinnati, 0.

"What was the name of the man who first went over Niagara Falls in a barrel, and was he successful? . . . An answer is demanded by the German Reichstag before tomorrow morning . . . If this is not obtained it is expected that . . . the Chinese will quit the city . . . leaving three on bases . . . Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Alternate Fattening And Reducing May Quickly Ruin Skin

SEPTEMBER is practically a national fast time and the new slimming program is scheduled for right after Labor Day. Those of you who have been putting your diet off all summer have a few more days of grace. You can put it off until then! But in the meantime, I want to help the ones who went ahead and reduced to keep their nice slim figures.

Once you have lost considerable weight, there shouldn't be the slightest danger you will ever be fat again. But some women are perennial reducers. They are always reducing 20 pounds or so, and then turning around and gaining every pound of it back. This is an aging process and I'll tell you why.

May Resemble Oversize Glove

When you acquire a nicely rounded padding of fat over your bones, the skin stretches to cover it smoothly. That is the stage know as pleasingly plump. When you pass it, the skin has to s-t-r-e-t-c-h to cover the increased size. When you reduce, it obligingly contracts, provided you have reduced fairly slow to give your skin a chance to contract, and have exercised enough to improve its tonicity.

As this process is repeated, the skin loses its elasticity. Every time you gain, the skin stretches; every time you reduce, it has to contract. After a while it does not snap back so readily. Then when you take off your 20 pounds your skin is left looking like an oversize kid glove. You don't want that to happen.

Why not take your cue from the screen and stage stars, who never permit their weight to go up more than three pounds? It's all very simple: If you never let yourself gain more than three pounds before reducing, you can't get fat! And it is very easy to take off three pounds. You should be able to lose those in a week.

Exercise Will Power

By this time your calorie judgement should be fairly sound and you will have no trouble juggling the calories to maintain a balance between your energy intake and and your energy output. If you can keep that balance, your weight will stay put.

By exercising your will power just a little, you won't even have three pounds to deal with. One of the best of all keeping slim rules is: Leave the table before you get that too full feeling.

American Models Held Better Than Paris Mannequins

Despite the interesting new silhouettes which French models wore at the Parisian style showings, the mannequins did not carry them off as well as would the American girl, according to an observer lately returned from Europe. Mrs. Thelma Doyle, of this city, is the traveler who believes there's no place like home-sweet home when it comes to poise in wearing clothes.

After having been a guest at most of the important openings in the French style capital, Mrs. Doyle, who manages Washington's School of Fashion Modeling, declares that she may branch out and open a similar school in Paris. "Although French models," she said, "are darkly good-looking, feminine and striking, they lack schooling and the poise which comes from proper training in posture, muscle control and confidence in self."

Commenting on the fashions which seemed most likely to succeed in this country, Mrs. Doyle cited day-time frocks which were plain to a point, relieved only with fine handwork of shirring and draping or bright Midas touches of gold. Long, tight sleeves, long, natural waistlines, fitted hip lines and back fullness were also noted.

Home Nursing Self-Taught

WHAT A BLESSING in case of illness—serious or slight—if you have no doubts about what to do, if you can refer to right nursing information.

Does your patient seem unusually weak? Check his condition immediately by taking his pulse. Place your first and second fingers on the inside of his wrist just above the thumb and count the beats.

If the rate is much higher than the normal 70 or 80 beats a minute, if the beats are weak and the rhythm fluttery, notify the doctor. If you must wait for him, give a stimulant such as hot black coffee.

For the less serious ailments, emergencies, there are simple treatments important to know. If Junior's nose bleeds overlong, have him lie down with head and shoulders slightly raised, an ice bag at the base of his neck. Under his upper lip press a roll of muslin or paper about ½ inch in diameter. If baby has a tendency to spit up, let him take his bottle while lying on his right side, with head and shoulders raised.

How to nurse other ills of babies and adults is explained in our 40-page booklet, "Practical Instruction for the Home Nurse." Has simple instructions by a registered nurse on routine nursing, care of post-operative cases. Gives symptoms, nursing techniques for contagious illnesses, care in pregnancy.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Practical Instruction for the Home Nurse," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Romantic Hostess Gown

Dolly Tree, one of the most talented of the Hollywood design fraternity, devised this hostess gown for Virginia Bruce. Black velvet was employed to achieve its period silhouette of puffed sleeves, nipped-in waist and vast skirt. With her characteristic selectivity and good taste, Miss Tree achieved an unusual contrast with snowy embroidery and paillettes used as a front panel and collar. Fortunately for the Washington woman with Miss Bruce's cameo-like blondeness, a local shop will sponsor a gown of similar design for late fall loungers

Bridge Clinic

MRS. SPRINK—I've been having the funniest pain lately. It's in my little toe——

MRS. DOODLE—Say, are you having that, too? It's in my big toe! . . . Wait! What did you bid? . . . All right Yes, everybody's having it. The doctor says it's some new disease—I've forgotten the name of it—but, anyway, it has something to do with the ends of your nerves wearing out.

MRS. PINEY—It's all this strain we live under. You know, I really think I'm developing stomach ulcers . . . Oh, is it my play?

MRS. DOODLE—The doctor says I have a spastic nerve.

MRS. CLACK—I have a spastic intestine!

MRS. SPRINK—Oh, so has Margie Nitt? You know what she's doing for it? Ballet dancing!

MRS. CLACK—Well, what I really need is to get out of this climate. Oh, wait, it's my turn!

MRS. PINEY—All this humidity has simply given me palpitation of the heart.

MRS. NOODLE—Say, I wake up every morning with this terrible feeling of pressure on my chest——

MRS. SPRINK—I can hardly get my breath . . . Go ahead; it's your play.

MRS. CLACK—I'm simply too tired to do anything.

CHORUS—Me, too!

MRS. NOODLE—It's the unnatural life we lead . . . Honestly, I never saw such a hand!

MRS. SPRINK—Did you hear about Lucille Dudd? She's gone to Pryor's.

CHORUS—What's the matter?

MRS. SPRINK—Wait till I make this play. . . . Oh she's got high blood pressure and kidney ailment and two or three other things.

MRS. PINEY—I ought to be gone over. wouldn't be surprised if there wasn't something wrong with my kidneys.

MRS. NOODLE—I've been having the queerest shooting pains. . . . Go ahead, it's your play.

MRS. CLACK—Say, where do you have pains from gallstones?

MRS. SPRINK—I don't know. Say let me tell you what happened to me this morning. I woke up with the funniest pain in my arm——

MRS. PINEY—Say, where do you have pain from fallen arches?

MRS. SPRINK—I don't know. Well anyway I woke up——

MRS. CLACK—Let me tell you what happened to me. I broke out all over——

MRS. NOODLE—Oh I've got that! That's nervous eczema.

MRS. PINEY—I've already had that! I think it was caused by my wool blankets——

MRS. SPRINK—I'm allergic to wool too. I had to have all my blankets processed. Say, who played last?

MRS. CLACK—I don't know. I had to have all my sofa cushions done over in kapok.

MRS. PINEY—I'm allergic to jello too——

MRS. NOODLE—It's the unnatural lives we lead.

MRS. CLACK—It all goes back to my nerves. I'm really suffering from nervous exhaustion.

MRS. PINEY—Of course my family doesn't realize it but I'm really on the verge of nervous prostration.

MRS. NOODLE—The thing I really need—of course I've known it for a long time—is a vacation. Say, whose play is it?

MRS. SPRINK—I've lost all track. Well, what I need is to get away from here, have a change of scene. I simply haven't been anywhere for ages—

CHORUS—I haven't either!

MRS. SPRINK—Say, where are we in this game?

MRS. NOODLE—I don't know. We'll have to start all over.

MRS. CLACK—I'll shuffle. Well as I was saying the whole thing is that what I really need is a good rest—

Mary Haworth's Mail

West Point Cadet is Convincing Lover but Poor Letter Writer; Resents Reminders; What is Girl to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been dragging a West Pointer for about a year now and have cared for him a great deal. He tells me he loves me, every time we are together, and I do believe him, as sincerity is one of his best qualities. However, either he is a poor correspondent or he is pulling the wool over my eyes. For someone who is supposedly in love, his letters are few and far between.

He tells me that sometimes his family doesn't hear from him for several weeks. And my family says that I should write to him more often, instead of waiting for an answer. Usually he sends me a letter once a week, and, occasionally, once in two weeks. He is not wealthy and cannot drag me much.

Mother seems to think he has another girl friend. But my girl friend dates his roommate and can check on him. Other girls I know also drag his classmates and they never see him with another date. This leads me to believe that he is just a lazy correspondent, but I can't help having my doubts, however, and I wonder what you think about him.

Perhaps this does not give you a clear picture of him. He is not a 'ladies' man; is studious and a stickler for rules and regulations. He seems to have bad luck in drawing watches and is often down in the dumps. People have told me that my letters are interesting and he seems to enjoy them. But I am at a loss to know what to do. He resents being reminded of slackness in writing, of course. Therefore, I am asking your advice on this point. Sincerely, PUZZLED.

Whether to Be Casual or To Take "Tired Attitude?"

DEAR PUZZLED: The casual, sensible thing to do in this case is (a) to be yourself; and (b) to take the young man's attentions at face value. If you like him a lot and he "seems to enjoy" your letters, write to him as often and as amiably as the spirit moves you—which should be, if yours is a reasonable spirit, not oftener than once a week on the average; although you may, of course, step up that average, now and again, if you have something to say that seems worth saying.

Friendship or love, when reciprocally and avowedly entertained between man and maid, are happy relationships which should be permitted to develop their own tempo or technique of expression; an expression which ingenuously reflects the essential temperaments of the two persons concerned. It is not friendship, or love, but coquetry in the woman, and cageyness in the man, which would prompt one, or the other, deliberately to engage in correspondence as though it were a hard-fought game of checkers.

I imagine the boy's infrequent, irregularly spaced letters may be attributed to three things: 1. To the fact that he simply isn't a facile correspondent. Letter writing, to him, probably represents one type of disagreeable labor. 2. To the fact that you are leaning so heavily, so to speak, on his interest in you that he has learned to take your alert responsiveness for granted. Hence, he sees no need to work for it.

And, 3. To the fact that your poorly repressed inclination to nag him about his supposed neglect has him unconsciously on the defensive. The more he feels he ought to write you—because he knows you expect it, because you have posed it as a sort of obligation—the more is he tempted to postpone the gesture. To the youthful temperament, no task is so irksome, as a rule, as that which comes under the heading of "duty." And the longer a given chore is postponed, the more objectionable it seems to the procrastinator. This is particularly true of letter writing.

Since the boy frankly "resents being reminded of slackness in writing," there is only one noncommittal expedient (so far as I know) that might jog him out of his lethargy. This would consist in employing the "tired attitude" (shall we say?) yourself. Until now, I daresay you have no sooner received a letter than you have hastened to reply. Within a few days to a week, your retort-courteous was in the bag. Informed and reassured, your beau was content to let the days drift by until the business of letter writing must again be faced.

But he will not be so well content if, having written to you, he must wait uncertainly for some acknowledgment. If, over a period of a month or several months, he finds your letters straggling through, days and perhaps a week or more later than he had counted on, he soon will be diligently taking the initiative. He will be answering your letters promptly, hoping thereby to stimulate a speedier cross-fire. And the moment he begins to twit you about your belated rejoinders, that moment will you begin to wonder why you ever took his silences so seriously. M. H.

Clips Used on Edge of Sleeves

Paris (AP).—Pairs of rhinestone clips have found new places to be—caught on the lower edge of short sleeves in a black crepe afternoon frock. An evening suit tells the time, though always the same hour, in a rhinestone and gold embroidery clock on a sleeve. The clock part is gold and the hours and hands are flashed up in the rhinestones.

Passementerie jewelry is the last word and the lightest form of "jeweled" ornament on record. It is fashioned of the same stuff that makes ball fringes and heavy upholstery braids, but handled by an expert, it becomes delicate and effective jewelry.

Australian Women Show Much Interest In United States

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I had a pleasant talk the other luncheon with Reta Findlay, a radio commentator from Australia, and I was surprised to learn how closely the big continent down under follows American affairs and, in Miss Findlay's case, the names and activities of our more active ladies. But why shouldn't it be so? We are as near as England, at least, and the pioneer spirit of that new and undeveloped world is, no doubt, more akin to our own. Miss Reta is here to get some recorded interviews with some of the better-known American women, for broadcasting in the Antipodes. I love that word . . .

I have mentioned here the world's worst soprano, whose howls now afflict our Murray Hill courtyard. She's a terror, and has raged unchecked up and down the scales, seldom hitting the dead center of a note. Late, the other afternoon, some poor bloke back from the office, all worn down with toil and horrible heat, hollered, "Shut up!" in the middle of a number. But the soprano didn't shut up—went right on battling Schubert's "Ave Maria" toe to toe, and losing every bar.

THE FAMED HOUSE of Tiffany, which once stood for everything really high-class in American jewelry and silver, and still does, in its conservative way, is startling the city by moving from its dignified old building at Thirty-fifth street and Fifth avenue to a new ornamental structure at the corner of Fifty-seventh street and the Avenue, rapidly becoming the real smart shop center these days. A great shock — why, the place seemed as permanent as the Empire State Building itself .

I'll Take:

Arroz Con Pollo, Says Thomas Burke

Favorite foods of Washington men are given daily in this column.

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

THE PRESENT STATE of international affairs occasions rapid-fire communications. Friendly and handsome Thomas Burke as chief of international communications division, Department of State, directs the various channels through which Uncle Sam transmits communications whether by telecommunications, aviation or shipping.

Mr. Burke

Although concerned with the State Department's program of activities, which involves the international aspects of aviation, radio, telegraph, motion pictures, cables and shipping, in addition to maintaining liaison with other departments, Mr. Burke found time to tell how to make his favorite dish without benefit of notes. A Spanish dish—Arroz con Pollo—Rice with Chicken, is on his preferred list. This is made of chicken, squid, clams and pork sausage combined with rice cooked in olive oil and highly seasoned with garlic and pimiento.

The following recipe is one which will make this dish:

(Rice with Chicken)

Cut a young chicken in 6 or 8 pieces and cook in olive oil to a golden brown. Season with salt and pepper. Add garlic bud, ¼ pound of pork sausage, cut in 1-inch pieces, and fry in oil until brown: Cook 1 cup of uncooked rice in olive oil, stirring constantly. Combine with other ingredients, adding the squid and clams. Add 2 pimientos, moisten with chicken stock and cook until the rice is soft, adding more stock if necessary. When done put on a hot service platter and garnish with pimientos fried in oil, cooked aparagus tips, cooked peas and a sprinkling of chopped parsley.

White wine and demi-tasse complete the meal when this exotic dish is served. Although Mr. Burke says that he cannot follow the continental method of passing up dessert, he will compromise for a compote of chilled fruit.

Mr. Burke has been dealing with business problems most of his life either in Europe or South America. With a string of alma maters to his credit—New York Law School, DeLaSalle Institute, Columbia University, the Pulitzer School of Journalism, in this country, and the University of Heidelberg and schooling in Dublin, Ireland, he was well qualified to take on responsibilities involving international matters. During the World War Mr. Burke was a captain in the Rainbow Division and following the war for 12 years was foreign director for the Standard Oil Co. at Hamburg, Germany. When Secretary of State Hull established an international communications division in 1938, Mr. Burke was appointed as its chief.

Stay-at-Homes Stage 'Aquitania Luncheon'

Party Is Consolation for Canceling Reservations on Liner; Vacationers Join in Reunion Atmosphere

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

SAILING CANCELLATIONS were responsible for an "Aquitania luncheon" in Washington yesterday when Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, who, with her husband and daughter, had booked passage on the Cunard liner gathered in a few of her friends for a party at Pierre's.

The Griffins and Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Southwick turned in their reservations on Monday. And Mrs. Griffin straightway decided to give herself a consolation luncheon.

"We'll call in a 'welcome home' party anyway," she said. And it was—complete with gifts tagged from the "Rue de la Paix," wrapped in fancy fixings and set off with Aquitania stickers.

A reunion atmosphere accented the get-together, which included several guests who recently had returned from tripping across the country and others who have been vacationing closer home.

Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, was the only one in the group who declared she had spent the entire summer in Washington, with only an occasional trip to New York to visit the World's Fair. The latter, incidentally, has been the chief reason she and the Ambassador have been staying close to their Capital bailiwick. It seems a steady stream of their countrymen have been pouring into America to see Grover Whalen's Big Show, and that virtually every one of them have stopped over in Washington before returning home.

Mrs. Henry F. Grady Among Guests

Mrs. Henry F. Grady, whose recent across-the-country lecture trip was a highly successful venture, contributed a number of interesting reports about former Washington residents she had met from coast to coast. Among the many widely known persons she visited was former Representative Nan Wood Honeyman, whose Oregon home is a favorite gathering place for Democraitc bigwigs.

News of Mrs. Albert Gallatin Simms (Ruth Hanna McCormick) was brught by Mrs. John O. Herrick (Genevieve Forbes Herrick), who recently returned with her husband from a two-months' stay in the West and Southwest. Although she is staying on at her home, Los Poblanos ranch at Albuquerjue, N. Mex., for the present, Mrs. Simms plans to come eastward in December, will spend Christmas in South Carolina, and may be in Washington before the winter is over.

Visiting in Albuquerque while the Herricks were there were Mrs. Simms' duaghter, Mrs. Cortland Barnes, the former Katrina McCormick, and her young son, who have since returned to their home in New York, and Elizabeth Simms, who finished at Foxcroft in June and will attend Bennington College this year.

Full of fascinating stories about the Indians in the Southwest is Mrs. Herrick, who ought to do a book about them. Some of her observations, perhaps, will find their way into articles she contributes regularly to a national magazine.

Mrs. Joseph E. Casey Also at Party

Mrs. Joseph E. Casey, wife of Representative Casey, who recently returned with her husband from their home in Lancaster, Mass., was among the guests. They will be at the Wardman Park Hotel for a short time. The former Miss Constance Dudley, Mrs. Casey is one of the most attractive hostesses of the Congressional contingent.

Other guests at the luncheon included Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Warfen Wheaton, of Philadelphia, who is staying in Mrs. George Holmes' house while Mrs. Holmes is visiting in California, and Mrs. Rodney Southwick, who said she didn't mind missing her trip to England one bit—since yesterday's party was the result. According to present plans, the Griffins, and probably the Southwicks, will sail early in October. But it all depends on the turn of the tide in Europe.

Count de Saint-Quentin Is Host at Luncheon

The French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin, had guests lunching with him yesterday.

On Tuesday afternoon he entertained at tea Count and Countess de Rochambeau, who left that evening for Canada where they will visit briefly before returning to Paris.

In New York

Mrs. S. Kent Legare, of Washington, who has been spending the summer at her home in Simsbury, Conn., is in New York for a stay and is stopping at the Ritz-Carlton.

Miss Marshall, Musician Wed

Of wide interest in Washington is the news just received in this country of the marriage in Berne, Switzerland, August 11, of Miss Peggy Marshall, of New York, niece of Vincent Astor, to Ernest Schelling, famous composer, pianist and conductor. The artist is 63 and the bride is 21.

The bride is the daughter of Charles H. Marshall, of New York, and of Mrs. Jan Juta, of Mendham, N. J. Her stepmother, the second Mrs. Marshall, was formerly Mrs. Brooke Russell Kuser and is the daughter of a former commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Russell. Mr. Schelling has been spending the summer at Villa Garengo, his place at Celigny on Lake Geneva. He and his bride have been on a wedding trip preparatory to going to London in October, when he will conduct the London Philharmonic Orchestra in a series of concerts at Queen's Hall. He is expected to return to the United States in November to begin his seventeenth season of children's concerts at Carnegie Hall.

The bride has been keenly interested in music and musical philanthropy in recent years and has been an active aide toward the welfare of the Musicians' Emergency Fund, ofter called "the favorite charity" of her aunt, Mrs. Astor, the fund's acting president.

Mr. Schelling married Miss Lucie Howe Draper, of New York, of 1905. She died in February, 1938.

Senator Green En Route to U. S. in Steerage And 'Lucky to Be Aboard' at All, He Says

Senator Theodore Green, of Rhode Island, who, when he travels usually does so de luxe, is now en route here across the Atlantic in the steerage of the S. S. Montrose. "And darned lucky to be aboard" he wrote his secretary here.

The Senator's interrupted vacation comes under the heading of crisis casualties. As delegate to the Interparliamentary Conference in Oslo, he intended to travel in Europe for several weeks afterward. Having studied at the Universities of Bonn and Berlin, he has numerous friends in Germany, whom he had hoped to see. But when Americans were advised to leave he rushed to Glasgow and boarded the Montrose. With him in steerage are Senator and Mrs. Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota.

THESE TWO SENATORS have had much more exciting vacations than most of their colleagues, the majority of whom seem to be resting at some quiet spot or mending fences in their home towns.

Senator and Mrs. Robert Taft have been spending several peaceful weeks with Mrs. William Howard Taft at the family summer home in Murray Bay, Canada. They will leave shortly to attend the San Francisco Exposition and visit other places on the West Coast. The Senator is busy taking on campaign workers in his Washington office.

Incidentally, many friends of the Presidential aspirant are wondering if his wife will be active in his campaign. Possessed of a forceful personality, an extremely friendly and pleasant manner, and intelligent besides, Mrs. Taft would be an ideal helper. Another point in her favor—she really likes people, even constituents, who drive mad the wives of many men in public life.

SENATOR WARREN BARBOUR and the handsome and very photogenic Mrs. Barbour are spending a week or two in an Adirondacks camp. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers has gone to San Francisco to see her only brother and his two little girls, who adore their Aunt Edith. This is the first summer in several years that the Congresswoman from Massachusetts hasn't stuck pretty closely to her home in Lowell, Mass., with frequent business trips to Washington in between.

Both Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin get their rest by working in the garden of their home in Burlington, Vt., a beautiful old New England town. The Senator likes trees and is particularly proud of the orchard which adjoins their large flower garden, the latter being Mrs. Austin's special domain. Their home is over 100 years old and has large rooms and high ceilings. The owners have modernized it without destroying any of its charm.

BACK AT OAKINGTON, their Maryland home, are Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, but they'll be off again shortly for another trip. They recently returned from a cruise off Long Island aboard the Sea Cloud, yacht of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, wife of Mrs. Tydings' father, Ambassador Davies.

Senator Robert La Follette has been staying in his home town of Madison most of the summer, making speeches. Mrs. La Follette is with him. Senator Scott Lucas, of Illinois, has decided that he deserves a vacation after having worked all summer, and hopes to get away with Mrs. Lucas for two weeks in the Wisconsin woods.

Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet are at their hideout in Delhi, N. Y., on Lake Delaware. They own an old house there and enjoy the life simple for a few weeks every summer.

A CARD received yesterday from Italy, signed Clarence Hewes, says that he is en route to Munich, Carlsbad and Berlin! He wrote of seeing the F. Lamot Belins in Monte Carlo, and of taking Miss Polly Randolph, of Washington, to the Lido for lunch. Miss Randolph was leaving the next day for Hungary, according to Mr. Hewes.

Miss Guinand, Mr. Maher Wed

White gladioli and Easter lilies were the decorations for the wedding yesterday morning at 10 o'clock of Miss Mildred Susane Guinand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richard Guinand, of Brooklyn, N. Y., to John James Maher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Maher, of East Providence, R. I. The ceremony took place in Washington at St. Patrick's Church, the Rev. Thomas B. Dade officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin and old lace, with a tulle veil trimmed in the lace. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Elizabeth M. Henry was maid of honor, wearing hyacinth blue moire and carrying pink roses. The bridesmaids, the Misses Audrey Winger, Pauline Stroupe, Jeanette Grothe, Lucille Lantz and Eleanor Huneke, were attired in shades of aquamarine blue and blush rose faille taffeta, and carried bouquets like that of the maid of honor.

Thomas F. Maher, jr., was best man, and the ushers were Arthur E. Donnelly, jr., William and Vincent Reilly, Cornelius Patton and John L. Sullivan.

The bride attended New York University and Mr. Maher studied at Columbia University.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. Mary R. Mayo, of Washington, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Marjorie Michaels, to Earl W. Thomas, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Earl Thomas, of Takoma Park, Md. No date has been set for the wedding.

Rohdes Here For Brief Stay

Capt. and Mrs. Boerge Rohde arrived yesterday at the Shoreham where they will stay briefly before going on to their country home, The Cedars, at Alderson, W. Va.

They came here from New York where they spent a few days at the Towers of the Waldorf-Astoria. Accompanying them are Capt. Rohde's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Rohde, of Copenhagen, Denmark, who are in the United States for an extended visit.

Mrs. Boerge Rohde is better known to Washington as Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, former American Minister to Denmark.

Niece of Mexican Envoy Is Wed at Quiet Ceremony in Nogales

Senorita Lupe Davila, daughter of Senor and Senora Carlos Davila, of Nogales, Mexico, became the bride of Rogelio Alfaro yesterday in a quiet ceremony in Nogales, witnessed only by members of the families and a few intimate friends.

Mr. Alfaro is the son of the former President of Panama and Mme. Ricardo Alfaro, who with their daughter, Yolande, left Washington several weeks ago for Mexico to attend the wedding. Dr. Alfaro, who now makes his home here, has also served as his country's minister here.

The bride has spent several winters here as the guest of her uncle and aunt, the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera.

Following a brief honeymoon Mr. Alfaro will take his bride to New York, arriving there on September 15, where he is connected with the New York World's Fair as a representative from the Pan American Union.

In November Mr. and Mrs. Alfaro will come to Washington to make their home with Dr. and Mrs. Alfaro.

Daniels Go To Chicago

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel left yesterday by train for Chicago, where they will be at the Drake Hotel for a few days. They expect to return to Washington next week. Mrs. Daniel will then make final arrangements for a trip to the New York World's Fair on September 9, when she will be joined by a delegation of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Early this week Mrs. Daniel had as her house guest Mrs. David H. Kinchloe, wife of Judge Kinchloe, of New York. Mrs. Daniel entertained at a luncheon on Tuesday for Mrs. Kinchloe, who left that afternoon for Annapolis to visit her daughter, Mrs. James Davis, wife of Lieut. Davis.

D'Espositos Visit Capital en Route To See Son

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua D'Esposito, of Chicago, are at the Mayflower before going to New York to visit their son, Joshua D'Esposito, jr.

Educators Return From Cruise Parley

By Jessie Ash Arndt,

The Post Club Editor.

Miss Selma Borchardt, vice president for the Americas of the World Federation of Education Association, is returning to Washington today from the eighth biennial conference, which was held in connection with a two-month South American cruise aboard the S. S. Rotterdam. Other Washingtonians also attended, including a party conducted by Henry W. Draper, supervising principal of the First Division of the District Schools, and Mrs. Draper. These have been arriving home since Monday when the ship docked in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Draper also headed a party which went from here to the conference held in Tokyo two years ago, at the time the Sino-Japanese situation was becoming grave.

The federation, which includes educators from all parts of the world, seems always to run into difficulties resulting from international tension. This year, the invitation to meet in Rio de Janiero was recalled because representations had been made to the Government there that the federation was a radical group.

Make Amends By Entertainment

"As a matter of fact," said Mrs. Draper, "no organization could be much more conservative than ours and officials in Rio, when they learned this, tried to make amends for the recalling of the invitation to meet there, by entertaining us royally. We held our sessions aboard the boat and in the University of Puerto Rico instead of at Rio, as had originally been planned, but nothing could have been more enjoyable than thedays of sightseeing we spent there."

The cruise included stops at Nassau, Havana, Kingston Jamaica; Curacao, Dutch West Indies; La Guaria, Venezuela; Pernambuco, Brazil; Buenos Aires, where the party spent three days; Montevideo, Uruguay; Santos, Brazil, and five days in Rio. Other ports were Bahai, Port au Prince, Trinidad; Barbados, Saint Thomas Island and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

In Puerto Rico a reception and dance were given at the Governor's mansion the night the boat arrived, to which all members of the cruise were invited. Puerto Rican teachers in addition to federation members attended the programs of the conference. Mr. Draper was acting chairman of the section on handicapped children. He presented a report on the procedure and the kind of cases which are being taken care of here, and stressed the need for provision of all such children. He also talked before the elementary schools section on curriculum revision.

Another member of the Washington group who participated in the program of the handicapped children section was Miss Marian Ronsaville, of Curtis School, who read the English translation of a paper written in Spanish on mentally low children.

Study Courses Held On Shipboard

She and Mrs. Beulah Aldrich, of Corcoran School, took the credit course on Geography of the Caribbean, which was given during the cruise, and George W. Hodgkins, of Central High School, was among the auditors attending this course.

Mrs. Draper acted as hostess for one of the teas given on the ship.

Among members of the Draper party was Miss Maxine Girts, American history teacher in Woodrow Wilson High School, who is a member of the American Association of University Women and of the N. E. A.

Others were Miss Grace M. Johnson, Mrs. Thomas B. Kramer, Miss Catherine Melton, Mrs. Bertha R. Teets, Miss Myrtle E. Moore, a teacher at Alice Deal Junior High School; Miss Mary E. Taylor, a teacher at Paul Junior High School; Miss Lewanna Wilkins and her sister, Miss Lydia K. Wilkins, Miss Mary Barnard, a teacher in Randle Highlands; Miss Florence Milliken, a teacher in Eastern High School, and Miss M. J. McKnight, a teacher in Western High School.

Among other Washingtonians besides those in Mr. Draper's group were Mrs. M. N. Felton, Miss Dorothea Sherman, Miss Laurine M. Smith, Miss Rose Stutz, Miss Clara Stutz, Maj. and Mrs. Brophy, Miss Theodora Rupli and Miss Anna Rupli, Miss Nellie Payne, Miss Clara Hartogenisis, Miss Flora Blumenthal, Max Blumenthal, Miss Edna Cowell, Miss L. A. Johnston, iMss Edna Gerkin.

Local Flower Experts To Judge in Va. Show

Dr. David Lumsden, of Washington, past president of the Potomac Rose Society, with Dr. Paul Evans, of Ivandale, Va., and Mrs. Lillian Wright Smith, of Chevy Chase, Md., will judge the interclub class at the Purcellville Garden Club flower show at the Purcellville Library September 14.

Others who will assist in judging the 22 specimens and arrangement classes are Mrs. Lomax Tayloe, of Vienna, Va., and Mrs. Warner Snider, of Leesburg.

The Warren County Garden Club won a leg on the silver trophy, donated by Mrs. Franklin H. Kenworthy in the interclub class at last year's exhibition. This class is open to all garden clubs.

Study Changing Map of Europe

Writer Says Munich Pact Has Taught Nations Settlement With Hitler Will Not Result in Real Peace

Russia's part in the present European crisis is still puzzling, but it seems clear that England will stand firm, Miss Mary Hawes told members of the department of government and foreign policy of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters yesterday. Miss Hawes, who returned in March from a stay of several months in Europe, spoke at the last of a series of summer meetings which have been held on alternate Wednesdays at the home of Mrs. Lowell L. Leake, in Chevy Chase.

In her study of the European situation, Miss Hawes interviewed political leaders in various countries and wrote a series of articles published in The Post. Yesterday she described the effect of fast-moving events on the different nations as she observed them, beginning a year ago today.

She was in Czecho-Slovakia September 30, the day of the Munich pact. Typical of the reaction of the people, she said, was the woman who wept, not because her son had gone with the army but because the country had been given over without a struggle to save it; and the French correspondent who sat on a park bench repeating, "It is a shame, it is a shame."

Going from Prague to Bratislava, she found the Slovaks disillusioned when they discovered themselves completely under German control with "autonomy but no money."

Hungary Hurries To Make Reforms

In Budapest, Hungary, she learned that the Munich pact, instead of tying the Danubian countries closer to Germany, had stiffened their resistance. Hungary, facing an acute agrarian problem, is hastening to bring about reforms before the Nazis gain strength by promising to effect them before the Hungarian government can, she said.

The Croats and Serbs in Yugoslavia have come to an agreement for the first time.

Poland, she pointed out, acted badly at the time of Munich, having been prepared to partition Czecho-Slovakia although the little republic had asked that Poland remain neutral. The Polish attitude began to change in January when there were evidences that the country's fate might parallel that of Czecho-Slovakia.

Miss Hawes said she believed Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain had at first been convinced that any settlement was justifiable to maintain peace, but that he realized after Munich that no matter what the settlement, there would still be no peace.

Mrs. Lorenz Talks On 'Union Now'

Mrs. Max O. Lorenz, president of the league and former chairman of the foreign policy group, reviewed Clarence Streit's "Union Now," explaining it as a plan for constitutional union of the nations with delegated powers to a super-government.

Mrs. Guy Faurote reviewed Dr. John Foster Dulles' talk at St. Lawrence University and reviewed the plan of the New Commonwealth. This would provide for a federation of nations and an international court to which all disputes must be referred and whose dictum would be final with a police force to carry them out.

There were 40 members of the league present for the program and the picnic lunch which preceded it.

Soroptimists Hold Luncheon

Members of the Soroptimist Club yesterday held the last of begin their regular weekly luncheons in the Coffee Shop of the Willard Hotel. Next week they begin their regular weekly luncheon meetings in the Cabinet Room of the Willard.

The first meeting will be devoted to informal accounts of vacation trips. The second Wednesday in September will mark the first business meeting since the close of the season.

Mrs. John F. Bennett, the president, will be present next week. Yesterday she was unable to be at the noon-time gathering as she had gone to Camp Bennett of the Central Union Mission. She cannot take a vacation in the summer because of the camp's demands on her time and attention and, beginning September 9, she must be here for the Saturday broadcasts of the mission of which she is superintendent. Any trips she takes this season will be between Saturdays, she says.

Among the Soroptimits lunching at the Willard yesterday was Miss Helen Barnhart, who has just returned from Lake Wawasee, Ind., where she represented her company at the convention of Continental Assurance agents. She was the only woman among 150 men at the meeting.

Others in the luncheon group were Miss Emma Buechele, Miss Emma Karst, Mrs. Betty Jones, Miss Augusta Uhl, Mrs. Claudia Brown, Miss Ella C. Werner, Mrs. Cynthia Warner and Miss Rena Pond.

Mission Aides Picnic at Camp

The Central Union Mission Helpers last night went to Camp Bennett for a picnic supper and their annual meeting. More than 125 members attended and were welcomed by Mrs. John F. Bennett, head of the mission.

The Helpers are a unique organization. They banded together six years ago to aid the mission and have maintained an active interest ever since, although they have but one meeting a year—the picnic and business session at camp.

There are but two officers in the organization, Mrs. Margaret Shale, the president, and Mrs. Inez Hawkins, treasurer. Its membership is largely comprised of workers in a single Government department. They have no money-raising entertainments, but their assistance to the mission is of the most practical kind—a contribution of $100 monthly toward the milk fund.

The importance of this may be judged, says Mrs. Bennett by the fact that the milk bill for the camp during the month of July was $287. Of the 88 children there during the month, 49 were undernourished and on special milk diets.

The Helpers decided on the contribution to the milk fund as a result of Mrs. Bennett's plea several years ago that persons who really wanted to help the mission give money for milk, for which there was always imperative need.

Last Sunday the Myra McCoy Andrews Day Nursery Mothers Club had its annual outing at the camp and presented a contribution of $100. There are only a few members in the club now as it was formed years ago by mothers in southwest Washington whose children were enrolled at the nursery. When this was disbanded its property was presented to the Metropolitan Police Boys Club and its funds to the Central Union Mission which used the money to build the lodge at Camp Bennett. The Mothers Club was kept intact in order to carry on its usefulness in assistance to the mission.

The Soroptomist Club, of which Mrs. Bennett is president, has provided a week's vacation at camp to ten girls this summer, through its civics committee, under the chairmanship of Miss Estelle Zirkin. The club gave one of the lodges at camp which is named for it, the Soroptomist Lodge. The children who have stayed there this season have made a group of attractive scrapbooks for the club to give to Children's Hospital.

2 Boys Make Shack of Box, Truck Hits It

One Scrambles Away Unhurt, but the Other Suffers Broken Leg

The urge of all youngsters to have a shack yesterday nearly cost the lives of Henry Lassiter, 8, and Connie Perkins, 6, who live next door to each other in the 100 block Quincy place northeast.

The youngsters were playing in front of the warehouses in the first block of Q street. A large cardboard box had dropped in a driveway and they appropriated it. They went inside and pulled the lid down.

A trash truck ran over the box. Connie screamed and scrambled out unhurt. But Henry had a broken leg. He was taken to Sibley Hospital, where his condition was described as undetermined.

Police said the truck was operated by William Yates, colored, 22, of 1340 R street northwest. A charge of driving with a bad handbrake was placed against him at the Twelfth Precinct station.

Addison Hill, colored, of Sandy Spring, Md., was mortally injured yesterday when he was knocked down by an automobile on Route 240 near Rockville, Md.

Witnesses said Hill was walking toward Rockville when he suddenly started diagonally across the road without looking behind. He was struck by a car which was said to be going about 45 miles an hour.

William C. Claiborne, of Mobile, Ala., was charged with technical manslaughter at Rockville police station and released on his personal bond. The body was removed to the Snowden funeral home.

Pope Believed Urging Roosevelt

machinery could be set up. President Roosevelt himself would head it as the obvious man.

Today, Cardinal Luigi Maglione, papal secretary of state, saw British, French, Yugoslav, Polish and Italian diplomats accredited to the Holy See. It is believed the Pope's latest step was communicated to them. Maglione then had an audience with the Pope, which lasted for two hours.

Every available sign indicates that Italy is not particularly anxious to see a two-power settlement restricted to the Danzig issue, but wants her own aspirations dealt with at the same time.

This was expressed forcibly today when the scrapping of what remains of the Treaty of Versailles was advocated by Premier Mussolini's paper Il Popolo d'Italia, as the only sound way of establishing a lasting peace.

The article was in the crisp, incisive style characteristic of Il Duce, by whom most observers believe it to have been written.

"When the water is up to their chins, they ask the Duce to save peace," the articles opened. The Versailles treaty is likened to a rotten tooth; opiates will only bring temporary relief; the molar must come out.

New Tooth Held Ready

Nobody doubts that a new tooth bearing the marks of a fine Italian chisel is already fashioned and ready to be popped into the patient's mouth if he can be induced to sit quietly in the chair.

Hopes that this would eventually be achieved rose today as messages continued to go back and forth between London and Berlin. There is no doubt that Rome is being kept fully informed, although it is no longer deemed necessary to give quite so much publicity to the fact.

Virginio Gayda, however, stressed the moderating influence exercised by the Duce and claimed the better atmosphere was due to direct contact maintained between Hitler and Mussolini.

The American Ambassador, William B. Phillips, saw Count Ciano this evening for 20 minutes. The visit was not made at the request of Washington, and is stated to have been purely for informative purposes.

War Plans Progess

Meantime, preparation for the eventuality of war are going on at a slow, deliberate tempo. Electric signs are banned as from tonight. After Sunday, cafes and restaurants must close at 11 p. m. The warning to evacuate the big towns as far as possible has now been made official, but it has not yet led to any rush.

For the first time, the streets of Rome were kept dark tonight. The occasional dim blue lights only accentuate the gloom.

There is a curious contrast between communications between Italy and France, and between Italy and England. From France the only things that come through are the trains and mails. It is impossible to get telephonic communication with Paris, but it is quite easy to get London.

It is noticeable that the theme of democratic bellicosity has been dropped from the headlines of the press, which takes the line "the situation is grave, but not desperate." It was also noticed that while the Italian radio mentioned that the Aquitania and Normandie have been searched by customs officers at New York, it did not mention the fact that the Bremen had also been searched. Neither did the press, although it recorded the German ambassador's protest.

Pope Pius XII tonight ordered all Vatican diplomats now on vacation to return to their posts as soon as possible "for the purpose of continuing peace efforts in foreign capitals," it was learned reliably.

Vatican diplomats affected by the reported instructions include the apostolic delegate, Mgr. Cacognani, who will return to Washington as soon as possible.

The Pope is understood to be considering abandoning his vacation at Castel Gandolfo and returning to the Vatican to direct personally the efforts for peace.

Pax Romana Delegate Tells Of Being Detained in Poland

Lithuanian Girl Found 'Railroad Stations Should Not Be Photographed;' Dutch Student Surprised at War Scare Here

A Lithanian delegate who was arrested in Poland the other day for taking a picture of a railroad station and a Dutch law student, who wonders what the map makers will do to his career, stood together on the steps after a Pax Romana meeting here yesterday—symbolizing some of the cross currents in that assorted gathering.

Sophia A. Vistartas, an American citizen of Lithuanian parentage who has lived much of her life in Europe, described how the world's tension caught her—all because of an innocent snapshot.

"A group of us Lithuanian delegates were on a train which stopped at Kutno, Poland. Through the window I snapped a picture of boys carrying sandwiches and coffee in front of the station. Suddenly officers appeared. One of the men in our group had a camera in his hands but he had not even taken a picture like mine. But he spoke German and that must have sounded suspicious to the officers.

Detained Five Hours

"So both of us were taken from the train to the police station, while the other delegates went on to Berlin without us. We were asked all sorts of questions, our baggage was searched. We had to sign a statement that we had no intention of spying. We were detained about five hours. We learned that railroad stations should not be photographed," she said wryly.

Although the Lithuanian people have felt Europe's uneasiness, not knowing what "may happen to them," she said, she learned more of tension in those five hours than ever before. Young, blue-eyed and sun-tanned, Miss Vistartas said cheerfully that she will return to her studies at Kaunas University in Lithuania unless the war situation interferes.

Tall 22-year-old Frits Van der Schrieck, law student at Leyden University, Holland, puffed peaceably on a pipe whose bowl was shaped like a wooden shoe. But far from peaceful were the meditations which accompanied the smoke.

Crisis Complications

"I'm planning to work my way back to Europe on shipboard. And I just had a letter by clipper from my father, telling me to come on a passenger boat instead of a freight boat which might have difficulties because of its cargo," he declared.

"I'm amazed by the exciting headlines here. Really we are taking it more calmly than you'd believe," he said, obligingly using English from among the five or six languages in his stock.

In spite of Holland's traditional neutrality, it has not escaped apprehensions, he said around the edge of the pipe.

Van der Schrieck came to the United States more than a month ago, to see something of the country before the eighteenth annual congress of Pax Romana, internatinoal Catholic student organization, opened this week at Catholic University. He saw sunrise at Grand Canyon and a forest fire in Oregon and other assorted sights on his trip to and from the West Coast, partly as driver for a touring party and partly by hitch-hiking.

Catholics Urged To Bind Americas

Earlier yesterday the Rev. William Ferree, S. M., University of Dayton, urged Pax Romana leaders to make stronger efforts to express the Catholic influence in inter-American relations. The influence of the United States in South America has been chiefly materialistic, he said.

Labor to Be Topic

The relation of the Catholic college graduate to the labor movement in the United States will be discussed at a morning session today, with Norman McKenna, of New York, managing editor of the "Labor Leader," in charge.

After Father Ferree at the meeting on relationships between the Americas had pointed out the predominance of the commercial element, Miss Helen Hanley, of Chicago, declared that "Catholics should become more interested in getting positions of importance" in firms which would send them to South America.

Dr. Edwin Sutin, of Chicago, said that "since South America has a predominantly Catholic culture and North America hasn't, we should be interested in what that country can do for us, not merely what we can do for them."

At an earlier session yesterday Prof. L. P. W. Renouf, professor of biology at University College, Cork, Ireland, declared that Catholics should combat arguments for birth control, sterilization and euthanasia, not merely on a moral or ethical plane, but with "sound scientific arguments drawn from biology."

Annenberg Named In Lottery Charge

wires "a list of prizes awarded by means of a lottery scheme."

It was the fourth time within three weeks that Annenberg had been indicted by Federal grand juries here. In addition, a special grand jury returned a presentment last week in which it reported the Annenberg interests had a monopoly in the race information field. It stated, however, that the anti-trust law did not apply to "illegal activities" but suggested that further action should be taken in the form of Federal legislation and enforcement of State laws against handbook gambling.

A grand jury returned a total of seven indictments today. They named 12 men in addition to Annenberg, Ragen and Bidwill.

In Philadelphia, Annenberg said ". . . I have never knowingly committed any wrong or evaded any income tax . . . I may well paraphrase the words of Nathan Hale—My only regret is that I haven't enough remaining years to give to my country."

Silver Spring Fire Damages Rowe Home

Blaze Is Confined To Third Floor and Roof; Loss Is Estimated at $1,000

Fire yesterday swept through the attic of the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Rowe, on Old Bladensburg road, near Franklin avenue, Silver Spring, Md. The roof was damaged badly.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Rowe, who called the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department. The blaze was confined to the third floor and roof, destroying an old-fashioned cupola. Fire Chief Charles Deffinbaugh estimated the damage at more than $1,000, and said the origin of the fire had not been determined.

The Rowes and their three children moved into the house Saturday from Brentwood, Md. Their furniture was damaged by smoke and water, but furniture belonging to P. G. Mygatt, former tenant, packed and ready for shipment to Florida, escaped with little damage.

Seek Bus Service

In an effort to secure bus transportation for the areas adjacent Georgia avenue extended from Forest Glen to Olney, Md., a group of citizens will meet shortly with E. D. Merrill, president of the Capital Transit Co., to discuss the proposal. The company will be asked to grant an experimental 30 to 60 day test. It is hoped to have the buses make four round trips daily.

Proponents of the proposed service pointed to the rapid development of the area, as proof that sufficient patronage would be given the buses to pay for the establishment of the route. The former bus line had failed they said, because of the high fare and uncertain schedules.

William F. Carlin, chairman of the group, appointed a committee composed of E. W. Tompkins, Wheaton; O. K. Duvall, College View; Donald Clagett, Westbrook Estates; Mrs. Clara May Downey, Olney; Joseph Buscher, Glenmont; Vincent Tutching, Manor Club, and William Thomas, Sandy Spring, to meet with Mr. Merrill, for a discussion of the proposal.

William A. Roberts, representing Safeway Trails, Inc., announced that his company will establish a bus line and make four round trips daily to Olney if guaranteed a minimum fare return of $30 a day, provided permission can be secured from the Maryland Public Service Commission.

Kensington Improvement

An extensive street improvement program was begun this week in Kensington, Md., by its Town Council. In addition the council is planning immediate development of a small park in the town and extension of Kensington Parkway.

Mayor L. B. Ernest announced yesterday that bids will be opened September 5 for the paving of Metropolitan avenue, widening and placing of curbs in one block of Bladensburg road and extension of Dupont street into the new boulevard. The project will form a connecting link between the approach to the new overpass over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the road to the old grade crossing.

The council has accepted an offer of the Greater Kensington Civic League to assist financially in the development of the small town park at Connecticut avenue. The league's assistance will permit the council to carry out a landscaping plan submitted by the University of Maryland.

Street improvements planned for this week include resurfacing of two blocks of Detrick street, one block of Knowles avenue, one block of Warner street, Howard avenue from Montgomery to Connecticut avenues, Hadley place and Kent street. Plans have also been completed for the improvement of Baltimore street.

Town Engineer Ralph Moore Berry is making a survey of property necessary for extension of the Kensington Parkway into the town, Mayor Ernest said. The council has secured an option on the property.

Ft. Myer Private Wins Honors for World War Service

Private Walter F. Brindley, of Fort Myer, Va., yesterday was awarded the silver star decoration by the War Department for gallantry in action near Chateau Thierry, France, on July 15, 1918, while serving as sergeant of the Third Trench Mortar Battery, Third Division, A. E. F.

Attached to the Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, Sixteenth Field Artillery, at Fort Myer, Brindlay now is in San Francisco on furlough and will return to his post here on September 10. He will be presented with the decoration at a special ceremony, officials said.

The citation accompanying the award said Brindley, a native of Trenton, N. J., operated a machine gun with skill and coolness even after he was wounded, and killed at least two of the enemy with a pistol after his machine gun was silenced.

Greenbeltians Ask Political Privilege

Attorney General Murphy has been asked to reverse the ruling by his office which bars Government employes from seeking town offices in a petition signed by 65 residents of Greenbelt, Md. The petition points out that 80 per cent of the residents of the town are Federal employes.

Town council elections are to be held next month, and the Attorney General was asked to rule in time that the Federal employes could take part. The petition was adopted at a meeting called by the Democratic Club of the Twenty-first District of Prince Georges County, of which Walter J. Bierwagen is president.

Park Purchase Issue Delayed In Arlington

Board Postpones Decision as Owner Makes Stipulations

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0500.

With the county board divided on the purchase of a 10-acre tract for $5,000 for park purposes, the matter was continued yesterday until the board's next meeting.

A letter from Mrs. Jesse Moran to County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan was read in which she said she was unwilling to sell any part of the property to the county unless it is unanimous desire of the county board.

Board Member George M. Yeatman said he felt $500 an acre, a price the unanimous desire of the county "entirely too high."

The board, upon the recommendations of the county manager, granted requests of John and Lelia Auffenberg for a change in zoning from residential A to local business of property at 658 North Glebe road; Bertie A. and Dewey Rice from residential A to local business of property at 662 North Glebe road, and Saul Gordon from residential A to local business of property at 109 North Glebe road. The application of C. Samuel and Mabel R. Schillingburg for a change from residential A to local business of a tract in the 4600 block of Old Dominion drive was denied.

The board approved total expenditures for the last half of the month amounting to $33,001.28, of which $21,044.43 represented the semi-monthly pay roll.

Roll Call Announced

Arlington.—Setting the goal at $7,500, George A. Collier, chairman of the Arlington County Chapter, American Red Cross, announced the annual roll call will start September 17 and continue through September 30. Mrs. J. H. Walton has again been named chairman in charge of the drive. Precinct workers will be announced within a few days.

There will be a meeting of the executive committee tomorrow night at the headquarters, 2517 Wilson boulevard, to complete plans for the drive.

Welsh Marks 93dBirthday at Rockville Desk

Montgomery's Oldest Official Has Served For Nearly 50 Years

Warner Wellington Welsh, Montgomery County's oldest public official and probably the oldest in Maryland, celebrated his ninety-third birthday at his desk in the Rockville courthouse yesterday. Welsh has served the county for nearly 50 years.

Welsh was unable to enjoy a small birthday celebration planned by his daughter, Mrs. George P. Henderson, wife of the president of Montgomery County National Bank at Rockville, with whom he lives. He complained of indisposition and retired before dinner-time. The cook had baked his favorite dessert, pound cake.

A native of Hyattstown, Welsh operated a store in that town in his youth, and then became clerk to the county commissioners and county treasurer. The late State Senator Robert Hilton succeeded him in office, and he opened a store at Olney but in a few years returned to the county commissioners' office and has been there ever since.

His memory often is called upon by county officials inquiring into the early transactions of the assessment books. County officials have assured his family that he has a desk and a job in the courthouse as long as he wants them.

He remembers the Civil War, recalling vividly his arrest by Yankee soldiers whom he "razzed" as they marched through Hyattstown. With several companions he was taken to a Federal camp near Jessups Cut, Md., and held for more than two months.

Fairfax Delays Opening of White Schools

Incompletion of Buildings Is Given As Reason for Lag

The Fairfax County (Va.) school board, in special session yesterday, announced that white schools would open September 21. Colored schools will open September 7.

The delay in opening of the white schools was said to be the result of building now under construction not being completed. Special reference was given to the school at Dunn Loring.

W. T. Woodson, superintendent, explained that with the increased enrollment he expected in some sections it might be necessary to send the children to school for only a half day for a short period.

It was announced that the new Mount Vernon High School would be completed about Thanksgiving.

Principals and supervisors will meet at the Fairfax Elementary School Tuesday, September 19, and the faculty of the several schools will meet at their respective buildings on Wednesday, September 20. Pupils will report for classes September 21, at 9 a. m.

Teachers of the colored schools will meet at their school buildings on September 6, at 10 a. m.

The board announced teachers would be paid as usual for September on October 1.

The next meeting of the board will be held at the courthouse September 5, at 10 a. m.

Mechanicsville Goes to Races As Firemen Put on Tourney

Sensational Riding Viewed With Alarm As Fowler Brings Streak o'Lightning Home; People Stand and Cheer

By Scott Hart
A Staff Correspondent.

Mechanicsville, Md., Aug 30.—They closed up the town here today—locked the store doors and forgot the midweek business—to swarm on a vast lot hard by, a cornfield, to watch the volunter fire department's third annual tournament.

Everybody was there from miles around. It wasn't long after the orator, J. Millard Tawes, the State comptroller, ended his talk on being a success and a winner in life, that Henry Fowler, president of the fire department, carried his chestnut mare, Streak o' Lightning, down the course fast enough to catch all three rungs.

It was the sensation of the day. The mare ran so fast she couldn't stop until reaching the edge of the pines, nearly a quarter-mile away. People stood and cheered, others blew their automobile horns. John Gardiner, the grand marshal, rode out to meet him, and the band played him in with "My Maryland," continuing the tune into a medley with the Marine Corps hymn.

Sheriff William Ernest Clarke, a tournament judge from St. Marys County rose to his feet, bestowing the highest accolade a tournament rider can have: "That's the way they used to do it!"

The winners were:

Novice Class—Joe Aitcheson, of Laurel, first; Duke Hance, of Prince Frederick, second. Amateur Class—Ernest Gates, of Oxon Hill, first; Miss Winsom, second. Professional Class—Eugene Street, of Bradshaw, first; J. F. Love, of Montgomery County, second, and Thomas Weembs, of Prince Frederick, third.

They rode in colors yesterday, thanks to Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, of Georgetown and Cremona, her estate in St. Marys. She gave the bright jackets and caps to the fire department. These were the first appearing hereabouts in the memory of anyone.

Many were talking about it when the mule races started and Sam Bailey's animal, Old Gum, won in a fighting, whip-throwing finish. The race was around a lengthy, weed-strewn course, and at one point Old Gum waited for the others to come up. In another race, Joe Boy, owned by Willard Graves, of Mechanicsville, went like he was heading to a feed trough—and won. Behind him, in order, rode Albert Anderson and Guy Russell. The band played them in.

Meanwhile, the town slept. Everybody was at the tournament, watching the lady knight, the professional and amateur riders standing about the big slot machine by the course, and having the man weigh them by guess for a walking cane. John F. Mudd, of Charles County, former racing commissioner, made the coronation address.

The firemen—Paul J. Bennett, chief; Benjamin J. Burroughs, assistant chief; Sylvester Adams, secretary, and Maddox Burroughs, treasurer, were all pleased with the day.

Alexandria Rotary Home Discontinued

Club's Day Nursery For Benefit of Working Mothers To Remain Open

The Alexandria (Va.) Rotary Club will discontinue operation of the home department at its children's home and day nursery, effective October 1, club officials announced yesterday, after a meeting of the home's directors. The institution has been the Rotary Club's principal welfare project for 12 years.

Under the new program, the home will operate only as a day nursery for the benefit of working mothers who desire to give their children proper care during working hours. A moderate charge for this service will be continued, based on the ability of the parents to pay.

Established primarily as a day nursery, the home in recent years has been operated also as a haven for destitute and homeless children. The decision to abandon the department was based on the fact that similar homes are provided by the State and by the local welfare department, it was understood.

—With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Aug. 30.—As if the new-found popularity of the White Sox were not sufficient concern for the Cubs in the battle for Chicago patronage, Mr. P. K. Wrigley continues to wheel up ammunition for the American League faction here. Wrigley, as owner of the Cubs, is recklessly making a target of his club in Chicago.

POVICH

Within the past two weeks the Cubs' owner has separated himself from $50,000 and who did he buy? Two discredited former American Leaguers from the Pacific Coast League named Julio Bonetti, a pitcher, and Dominic Dallesandro, an outfielder. Both players were discharged for incompetency two years ago by the Browns and the Red Sox, respectively, yet Wrigley announced that he "hopes to bolster" his team with Bonetti and Dallesandro.

The National League has been valiantly attempting for several years to live down an unpleasant reputation that it is a haven for broken down, spavined and unskilled American Leaguers, but Wrigley goes blithely along perpetuating the idea. On his current Cubs are Carl Reynolds, Earl Whitehill and Jack Russell and one critic has been unkind enough to say that Wrigley is trying to win the 1939 National League pennant with Washington's 1934 American League team.

Al Simmons laughed two years ago when he said, "I'm not worrying about my job on the Washington club. When I'm washed up in this league, I will always have five years ahead of me in the National." And that's where he ended up, too, with the Boston Bees, and doing very well.

Bonetti Couldn't Make It With the Browns

We remember both Bonetti and Dallesandro as American Leaguers. Bonetti had a small measure of success with the Browns as a pitcher but when a pitcher is incapable of holding a job with the Browns, he is hardly a big league prospect. Dallesandro was a sawed-off outfielder the Red Sox carried for two seasons in the chief hope that he would draw a base on balls.

It is hardly any recommendation for the new pair of Cubs that they were stars in the Pacific Coast League. Joe DiMaggio was the last great player to come out of the Coast League. Time was when the coast circuit was perhaps the fastest minor league in the country, but it has retrogressed rapidly. It is still rated as Class AA, but baseball men are agreed that it does not compare with the American Association or the International League, and for that matter faster ball is played in the Southern Association and Texas League.

There are some unsavory figures from the Coast League, too. Ripper Collins, the first baseman whom the Cubs dismissed last year because he couldn't hit, has been a batting sensation against Coast League hurling. And you'd never guess the name of a fellow who has hit safely in 26 games on the Coast and is now batting .350. He is Alan Strange, a shortstop whom the Nats bade begone in a hurry after watching him for a month and drawing the conclusion that he couldn't buy a base hit.

Here in Chicago the folks have not yet conceded the National League pennant to the Reds or Cardinals. They still think the Cubs can take it all, a state of mind occasioned no doubt by vivid memories of the Cubs' spurts of 1935 and 1938. In those seasons the Cubs staged sensational September sprees, winning 21 games in a row in 1935 and 16 straight last year. But if the Cubs do succeed in getting in the World Series they will have succeeded only in maneuvering themselves into a spot which they should have avoided.

The Cubs Better Stay Out of the Series

Because then they will be called upon to face the Yankees in the World Series, and that will be no joy for the Cubs. Their pitiable performance against the Yanks last year went far toward souring the customers on National League baseball as contrasted with the American League brand.

Bucky Harris, in discussing that 1938 World Series today, declared "The Cubs and the Yankees could have played for the rest of the month of October and I don't think the Cubs would have won a single game."

Acknowledging that the Nationa lis a weaker league than the American Red Ruffing of the Yankees was prompted to say: "I'll never understand how a team like the Cubs could win a pennant even in the National League. I'd rather pitch against the Cubs than against the last-place Browns."

The Yankees have, of course, been the chief oppressors of the National League in the World Series, and National Leaguers point out that the Yankees dominate the American League fully as much. It is an attempt to prove that the only difference between the two leagues is one team—the Yankees. But that is hardly true.

The fact is that the National League sets a lower standard of excellence than the American League. They emphasize pitching but they do not demand the same vigorous hitting by their infielders and outfielders that the American League asks. And when they toss their best against the American League's best, an unhappy result is inevitable.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 30.—Eddie Mead, Al Weill and the rules of grammar were all suspended at the boxing commission yesterday. Mead drew a 13-month suspension and Weill a four-month stretch, both sentences to be lifted so they can officiate at the next Ambers-Armstrong fight. Grammar was suspended by the neck, after a severe punishment that included Gen. Phelan's unparseable ultimatums and Weill's "I'm guilty—with an explanation."

CONSIDINE

The general got the confusing meeting off on the right foot by calling Mead. "If you have any charges to make, Mr. Mead, make them here and now. First stand up and repeat this: 'I, Henry Mead, do solemnly swear to speak the whole truth and nothing but the truth.'"

"Okay," Eddie agreed generously, now foist . . ."

"Say," snorted the general, "you can't make charges just by stating them. They must be written and presented to this body, not spoken."

"But I got a lotta them, general," Mead protested. "How am I going to write them out now?"

"Sorry, you'll have to," the general barked. "Now go ahead and tell us your complaints."

—Then Eddie Poured Out His Heart

Mead sighed a little and started a long beef which had to do with Arthur Donovan "being prejudiced to my fighter." Licking his lips for inspiration, or over the prospect of an impending beef stew, Eddie poured out his heart, in dignified prose, took a belt at Donovan for the way he "stood behind Ambers all through fight so's he couldn't see where Armstrong's punches were landing . . . "and finally asked that the referee's license be revoked for incompetence. He journeyed on to Judge Frank Fullam and demanded that he be asked why he gave the fourteenth round of the fight to Ambers. "When my fellow belted him from start to finish." Mead admitted that the pictures of the fight showed Armstrong committing fouls in two rounds, but not in five. He finished by asking that the decision be reversed.

Al Weill cheerfully admitted that he was guilty of conduct unbecoming a fight manager (a charge that unfortunately wasn't properly amplified). But he then went on for a few thousands words to explain that on the night of the fight he ran up and down the ring apron, hurling defis, only to see that Donovan punished Armstrong for trying to kill Ambers with fouls.

Blunt Bill Brown Asks Question

The witness chair was still warm when Mead was back in it, to answer some quiet and sensible questions put to him by blunt Bill Brown.

"Eddie, did you tell reporters that two weeks before the fight I predicted that there would be five fouls called against your fighter?" Brown asked.

"Well, Bill, the stories were brought to me," Mead said, squirming a trifle.

"If you believe these stories enough to spread them," Brown insisted, "why, then did you go out and bet a lot of money on your fighter."

"I didn't know what to believe, Bill. I know you're so fond of Ambers and am . . ."

"Of course I am," Brown answered, "I'm fond of a lot of fighters, but once they're in that ring they're on their own. Didn't you know that Al Weill came to me just before the fight and begged me not to appoint Donovan as the referee?"

"I certainly wish you had listened to him!" Eddie cried fervently, thinking of the $8,700 he bet on Armstrong.

Weill Embarrassment Deepens

Weill was then recalled for a quiz more embarrassing than the interrogation concerning his unbecoming conduct. Adjusting his pince nez the general read a newspaper clipping quoting Weill (before the fight) as stating that commissions shouldn't permit a man like Armstrong to challenge out of his class. "It stagnates boxing to have one man champion of two classes or more," read the general, quoting the uncomfortable witness whose fighter is now going to try to add the welterweight crown to his lightweight title.

"Does that mean that you'll give up the lightweight title if Ambers beats Armstrong for the welter title or does it?" The general demanded.

"Ha rumph . . . kaf . . . kaf," said the witness, using a foreign tongue, "I'll have to take that up with my fighter . . ."

The general then recessed the meeting for the third time, taking his colleagues off-stage to a dark room. They bounced back a moment later and the general read off an ultimatum rejecting Joe Jacob's application for a managerial license, provided the manager of Tony Galento ever forwards one. With that as a warm-up the general then suspended Mead and Weill, except for the month they have work to do, and added that Joe Jacob's license as a second, if he applies for one, also will be snubbed.

It was the first time Jacobs had been suspended this month.

Lou Machado Rushed Here After Accident

Popular Jockey Said Critically Injured in Bad Spill at Marlboro

MARLBORO, Md., Aug. 30.—Jockey Lou Machado, New England boy and prominent on Maryland's smaller tracks, was seriously injured in today's sixth race when his mount fell. Machado was tossed into the path of oncoming horses and it was believed that one of them struck him. Maryland State police rushed him to Casualty Hospital, in Washington, before an ambulance arrived.

Machado was reported in critical condition by hospital attaches. The 22-year-old Fall River, Mass., jockey was said to be suffering a severe head injury. The hospital report stated that Machado was kicked by another horse after his mount fell. Physicians worked over the injured jockey more than two hours in the emergency room.

Machado was riding Spanish Dot when the horse stumbled and went down as the field entered the backstretch. The race was won by Counter Pass, ridden by Jockey Sammy Palumbo, and a $13.40 shot.

Bubblesworth, a $4.90 favorite with Apprentice Jockey Harold Allgaier riding, won the seventh race in a gallop. Clymené was second, with Bynum's Run third.

N. Y. Angler Lands World Record 868-Lb. Tuna

Liverpool, Nova Scotia, Aug. 30. (U.P.)—J. Frank Johnson, of 150-41 seventh avenue, Whitestone, Long Island, today landed an 868-pound blue-finned tuna to establish what was described here as a new world record.

Johnson, taking his first fish of the day in his first day of fishing, used a Vom Hoff 26-ounce tip and a 10-0 reel with regulation thread line.

He took 2 hours and 27 minutes to land the big fish, which was 10 feet 2 inches long and 6 feet 10 inches in girth.

His guide was Harry Doggett.

The previous record was held by Alfred Kenny, of Shelburne, Nova Scotia, who last year landed an 864-pound fish.

Parshall Drives 2 Harness Winners

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 30 (A.P.).—Dr. Hugh Parshall drove two winners in today's Grand Circuit harness horse meet at the New York State Fair Grounds here, piloting Clever Hanover to victory in the State Fair Trot, and wining the Onondaga Hotel Purse with Her Ladyship. Clever Hanover won two of the three heats in the trot, while Her Ladyship was the only straight heat winner of the day.

The feature event of the day, the Haberle Congress $5,000 Stake Trot, was captured by Sister Mary, a bay mare owned by the Hotel Baker Stables, of South Charles, Ill., and driven by Sep Palin. Palin drove Sister Mary to win in the first two heats in front of Hollywod Audrey, Dunbar Bostwick's entry from New York, but was forced to take second money to Audrey in the third.

Ken Keltner's Single Beats Yanks in 10th

Indians Win, 4-3, Before 35,000 in Stadium Night Tilt

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 30.—Ken Keltner's single scoring Ben Chapman, from second, gave the Cleveland Indians a tenth-inning victory over the New York Yankees, 4 to 3, tonight before a crowd of 35,000 at Cleveland Stadium.

The Tribe nearly gave the game away on errors. The Yanks tied the score at 2 to 2 in the seventh, scoring a run without a hit, and took a 3-to-2 lead on another run in the eighth when Bruce Campbell made a three-base muff off Red Rolfe's fly to right. Rolfe scored on Charley Keller's single.

The Indians tied it up in the ninth when Lefty Gomez walked Pinch-Hitter Oscar Grimes with the bases loaded.

New York collected only four hits off Sothpaws Al Milnar and Harry Eisenstat, while the Indians were held to seven by Gomez and Fighthander Johhny Murphy.

Joe DiMaggio doubled in the first inning, scoring Rolfe who had singled. Cleveland took a 2-to-1 lead in the fourth when Hal Trosky clouted his twenty-third home run of the season into the rightfield stands with Ben Chapman on base.

Nats Split Twin Bill With Sox, 5-2 and 4-3

Myer Gives Griffs Even Break On Triple in 9th Inning of Nightcap; Krakky Takes 10th

A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Aug. 30.—The venerable Buddy Myer came out of the dugout in the role of a pinchhitter late this afternoon and with a ninth-inning three-bagger slugged the Nats to an even break in a double-header with the White Sox.

Myer's blow, a line drive to the scoreboard in right-centerfield, fetched Joe Krakauskas a 4-3 victory over the White Sox in the second game after Joe Haynes had dropped a 5-2 decision to the Sox earlier in the afternoon. But Krakauskas was a co-hero in his own triumph.

The big left-hander held the White Sox to seven hits in registering his tenth victory of the year and produced the winning run himself when he scored Myer from third base with a long fly to leftfield. The victim of Myer's blow which opened the ninth inning was Clint Brown, ace relief pitcher for the Chicago club.

Myer batted for Giuliani in the ninth inning after the Nats, in the eighth, had lost a 3-1 lead, permitting the White Sox to score the tying run on a pair of errors by Jimmy Vernon and Krakauskas on the same ground ball.

Manager Jimmy Dykes wheeled old Ted Lyons out to the mound in the first game for Lyons' first start in two weeks and the veteran knuckle-baller bamboozled the Nats thoroughly. He held the Washington club to four hits and until the ninth was pitching a three-hit game to the great satisfaction of the 6,000 customers.

In that first game, Haynes was a

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 30.—Dutch Leonard will make his pitching debut in night ball in the big leagues tomorrow when he takes the mound against the White Sox under the lights of Comiskey Park.

Manager Harris theorizes that the effectiveness of Leonard's knuckle ball will be accentuated under the lights. "It's tough enough to follow in the daytime," said Harris, "it ought to give Leonard a big edge at night. But it may be tough on our catchers."

Leonard will be seeking his sixteenth win of the season. His opponent will be Edgar Smith, diminutive lefthander of the Sox.

Ken Strong Boots 2 Three-Pointers, Ward Cuff Another; Leemans Is Star

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Soldiers Field, Chicago, Aug. 30.—Professional football as exemplified by the champion New York Giants, who sent three field goals spinning through the night air, triumphed over the college All-Americans in vast Soldiers Field. Down to a 9-0 defeat went the 1938 campus heroes before a gatheing of 81,456 early-season fans.

Full into the spotlight crashed big Ken Strong tonight, making his return to organized football after four years in an outlaw league. Eleven years out of New York University, the hard-bitten Strong shuttled in and out of the Giants back field at appointed moments and, like a specialist at the art, slammed two place-kicks over the bar and between the posts.

Ward Cuff, his field goal kicking coleague on the Giants, set the pros up to a 3-to-0 lead in the first quarter with a place kick from the 34-yard line, and then Strong clinched the game for the Giants. From the 22-yard line in the second quarter he boomed an unerring 3-pointer, and in the last quarter he dropped back to his own 41-yard line and kicked home three more comforting points.

Leemans Sparks Attack

It was Tuffy Leemans(appearing this time in professional regalia on the same field where three years ago he was the standout performer for the Collegians, who sparked the last two Giant drives to their field goals. Slipping through the tacklers and around the ends, and manning the Giants' forward-passing tatack, Leemans was the driving force behind th epros' offensive.

And the college All-Stars—bluntly, they were a tremendous op. Not until the last minute of play were they within the Giants 30-yard line. Their running attack, modeled after the Notre Dame system of Head Coach Layden foundered ingloriously against the bristly professional line, and their big names—Davey O'Brien, Sid Luckman, Howie Weiss—were powerless.

Ouch—O'Brien Fumbles

The vast gathering, hungry for a glimpse of little O'Brien, was electrified in a negative sort of way almost at the outset when O'Brien fumbled the first ball he touched—a Giant punt that was recovered by the pros on the Collegians 29-yard line.

The professional note was dominant in the ball game almost from the outset, with Davey O'Brien eliciting a gasp from the huge crowd by fumbling the Giants' first punt on his own 10-yard line. Jim Poole, tall Texas end of the Giants, recovered the loose ball for the pros on the Collegians 29-yard line. The Giants immediately opened with a passing attack that foundered and a 15-yard penalty for holding set them back. From the 47-yard line, Ward Cuff attempted a field goal that wideof the posts.

The All-Stars were pitable in their attempts to bang the Giants' line, a 3-yard gain by Goldberg representing their most productive play, and O'Brien was forced to punt from deep in his own territory. It was a moderate boot which rolled dead on the Giants' 41, and from that point the pros launched a 59-yard march to a field goal.

A lateral pass which Ed Danowski flipped to Ward Cuff sparked the Giants' drive. Taking the ball from Danowski behind the scrimmage line, Danowski threaded his way to a 17-yard gain down the sidelines before O'Brien brought him down. When Karcis failed in a try at the line, Danowski resorted to passes, twice overshooting his mark.

Then Cuff booted a field goal from the 34-yard line to set the Giants up in a 3-to-0 lead at the end of nine minutes of play.

The Giants' score was the signal for Elmer Layden to install a new backfield comprised of Osmanski, of Holy Cross; Bottari, of California; Columbia's Sid Luckman and Minnesota's Faust. Faust provided the college fans with their first chance of an outburst when, back to punt, hefumbled the pass from center, and forced to run, dashed 11 yards around en dto his own 35-yard line.

Jeffra's Manager Posts $10,000 Guarantee for Title Bout

Archibald's Appearance Assured Here

Waxman Turns Over Cash in Commission's Office to Bind Bout For Championship

By Al Hailey

Arrangements for the featherweight title fight between Champion Joey Archibald and Harry Jeffra here September 11 soared to a dramatic climax yesterday when Max Waxman, manager of Jeffra, turned over $10,000 in cash to Al Weill, the champion's manager, in the offices of the District Boxing Commission.

Weill, victim of a last-minute case of jitters, came to town yesterday demanding his guarantee and issuing ultimatums that unless the money was produced the fight would be off.

The panting and fuming New Yorker was strangely soothed, however, when Waxman peeled off five $1,000 bills, six $500 bills, 20 $100 bills and magnanimously invited him to count them.

Archibald Here Today

Weill obliged, stuffed the bills in his pocket and then announced he had to catch a train for New York. He will bring Archibald to Washington today, and then the champion will start training in a local outdoor camp tomorrow.

The $10,000 transaction was staged in the presence of Waxman's attorney, Johnny Sirica, Heinie Miller, Boxing Commission secretary, Promoter Joe Turner and newspapermen conscripted from various sections of town to watch the auspicious proceedings.

"Listen, I am strictly a business man and I want my money now or Archibald is not going to fight here," Weill confided. "No money, no fight."

Always Trusted Max

"Good, I won't have to worry about any checks, I always knew I could trust you, Max," Weill said happily, throwing a friendly arm about Waxman's shoulders.

"You know, I've handled millions of dollars in the fight business—money never did worry me," Waxman, who has managed three world champions, explained. Waxman also manages the affairs of Jack Dempsey.

Jeffra, former bantamweight champion, will come to Washington Sunday to finish his training in an outdoor camp, Waxman said.

Reservations for the 15-round battle will can be made at Turner's arena, Fourteenth and W streets northwest.

Williams Hero, Goat As Tigers Beat Boston

Rookie Outfielder's Three-Run Homer Nets Early Lead but His Eighth Inning Error Gives Tigers 7-6 Victory in Series Opener

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 30.—The Detroit Tigers bunched two hits and two walks with a Boston error today, to come from behind in the eighth inning and defeat the Red Sox, 7 to 6, in the series opener.

Boston's sensational rookie outfielder, Ted Williams, batted a home run with two mates on base to put the Sox in the lead in the third inning, but it was his error on Birdie Tebbetts' single that permitted Pete Fox to score from first base with Detroit's winning run in the eighth. Williams' homer was his twenty-second of the season.

Jim Tabor and Moe Berg, of Boston, and Earl Averill, of Detroit, also hit home runs. The Tigers were outhit 12 to 8, Freddy Hutchinson giving up eight of the safeties and being charged with all the Boston runs before he was removed from the pitching mound in the fourth inning.

Jack Wilson pitched well enough to win until the eighth, which he entered with a 6-to-4 lead. With one out, Wilson walked Rudy York and Pinky Higgins. Fox scored York with a single, and Higgins counted the tying run on Tebbetts' safe hit to right, which Williams fumbled, allowing Fox to follow him across the plate.

The Sox threatened in the ninth, putting two men on base on walks. With two out, Buck Newsom, who hurled nearly a full game yesterday against the Yankees, walked out to the mount for Detroit and proceeded to fan Pinch-Hitter Frank Finney to end the game.

The Tigers used five pitchers in all, Slicker Coffman, who hurled the eighth inning, being credited with the victory.

Ernie Dusek To Wrestle Singh Tonight

Wrestling returns to the outdoors tonight when Ernie Dusek will attempt to halt the local reign of Nanjo Singh and his cobra clutch in Griffith Stadium. Singh will be making his eleventh headline exhibition under auspices of Promoter Joe Turner.

Nanjo may meet his Waterloo tonight at the hands of Ernie, although he has never had his shoulders pinned here, Turner said yesterday. It develops that Nanjo may have trouble locating Ernie's neck.

"This ferocious Nebraskan is supposed to have the thickest head—I mean neck—of any grappler in the business," Turner explained vividly. "In fact Ernie's neck is so powerful that he is supposed to be able to break any neck hold, strangle no exception."

Ernie, returning for the first time in over a year, is considered the "uncrowned world's champion," Turner explained. Considering that some 25 other wrestlers have been crowned world's champion, this fact should add some to Ernie's prestige.

Rudy Dusek, chief of the four wrestling Duseks, will also return tonight to meet Abe Yourist, former pro football player, in a special match. Joe Cox meets Stanley Pinto, Jack Hader meets Angelo Savoldi and Tommy Rae battles Bob Wagner in supporting bouts which begin at 8:30 p. m.

A's Defeat Browns Twice, 9-8 and 2-0

Score 9 Times in Seventh of First Game; Nelson Victor

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 30.—The Browns dug themselves a deeper hole in the cellar of the American League today by losing a double-header to the seventh-place Philadelphia Athletics, 9 to 8 and 2 to 0.

Lynn Nelson pitched the shutout in the nightcap, which was called on account of darkness after seven innings.

Ritzenberg, Smith Win Doubles Title

With Allie Ritzenberg's overhead smashes providing the bulk of the earned points, and C. Alphonso Smith's steady volleying keeping the ball in motion, the speedy pair captured the United States Government tennis double title yesterday at the Potomac courts.

Victims of the successful combination were Samuel Hayes and Ray Stocklinski, and the score was a comparatively easy 6—3, 6—1, 6—2. The losers, conceded a fair chance of turning back the torrid Ritzenberg and Smith, after ousting the defending champions, George Herbert and John Smith in the semi-finals, were never a serious threat after running up three games in the first set.

Flip Jackson Scores In Colored Net Play

"Flip" Jackson, Howard University star, advanced to the semi-finals of the Mall Tennis Club colored tourney yesterday by defeating J. B. Duncan, 6—4, 6—8, 6—3. LeRoy Millender also advanced with a 7—5, 6—4 defeat of Prindas.

Anacostia Cardinals Take Double-Header

Both ends of a double-header between the Anacostia Cardinals and Ada's Market went to the former yesterday, Reed hurling the Cards to a 4-to-2 triumph in the opener and Truman starring in an 18-to-4 victory in the nightcap with two singles and two triples.

Eight D. C. Golfers in Hershey Open

Walper, Houghton Head Local Players In $5,000 Tourney

By the Associated Press

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 30.—On the last leg of the summer tour, the Nation's top golfers headed tonight toward this Pennsylvania sports center for a crack at $5,000 prize money and the Hershey open championship.

A field of nearly 100, including U. S. Open Champion Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., and the home professional, P. G. A. Titlist Henry G. Picard, will touch off the four-day 72-hole medal play grind at 9 a. m. tomorrow.

Seven Washington, D. C., professionals and one amateur, Ralph Bogart, or Army and Navy, will be in the starting field after the $5,000 purse and the amateur awards.

Heads D. C. Delegation

Heading the District delegation is Leo Walper, the driving range owner and two-time Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion, and Al Houghton, Bedford Open champion.

Al Jamison, Indian Spring; Al Treder Manor, the Worsham brothers, Lewis, Burning Tree professional, and Virgil, assistant at Chevy Chase, and Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, are also seeking a share of the prize money.

The low 60 and ties in the first 36 holes will qualify for the final rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Picard and Nelson came to the tournament prime favorites.

Picard Holds Record

Picard knows every blade of grass on the 7,017-yard, par 73, Hershey Country Club course. In one of the two times he captured the Hershey Open, he established the 72-hole record of 280 and the 18-hole mark of 65.

Nelson's accurate irons are admirably suited to the Hershey course with its premium on close second shots.

Ed Dudley, winner of the first Hershey Open six years ago, who teamed with Billy Burke to triumph in the Walter Hagen best ball tournament last week-end, has submitted his entry.

Other Threats

Other topnotchers who must be reckoned with include Gene Sarazen, cocky little holder of every major championship at some time or other; Johnny Revolta, former P. G. A. king; long-hitting Jimmy Thomson, of Shawnee-on-Delaware; Harry Cooper and Denny Shute.

Pennsylvania entries include Felix Serafin, of Scranton, who lost to Ted Luther in an extra 36-hole playoff match in 1935; Ralph Hutchison, Bethlehem; Henry Williams, jr., Phoenixville; D. L. Red Francis, Altoona; Art Clarke, Uniontown; Harlan Will, Lancaster; Frank Moore, assistant to Nelson at the Reading Country Club; Hugh T. McInnes, York, and Ted Johnson, Philadelphia.

Public Links Championship Heads Big September Tournament Card

Maryland State, District, Women's Golf Bodies Busy

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The crowning of a city public links champion next week in the four-day battle for the title now held by Andrew Oliveri starts the ball rolling in the biggest September tournament golf card here in years, and probably all time.

OLIVERI

With 75 entries already in the fold, Tommy Doerer expects to have over 100 in the field for the 18-hole qualifying rounds at three courses next Tuesday. East Potomac will qualify 18 for the championship flight of 32. Rock Creek and Anacostia eight each. Entries close Sunday at 6 p. m. at the three courses.

Medalist at each course will receive a medal for his efforts, and the 32 low scores will swing into match play Wednesday morning, with the second round in the afternoon. Quarter and semifinals will be played Thursday and the 36-hole finals next Friday, all the matches at East Potomac. The winner will receive a medal and the S. G. Leoffler trophy for a year.

Two Maryland Events

The Maryland State Golf Association has two of its annual events on the early September card. Next Wednesday, September 6, the eleventh annual State seniors' tourney, open to members of clubs in the association who have reached the 50-year mark, will be played over the Green Spring Valley layout at Garrison, near Baltimore.

The second State event is the fourth annual Father and Son Tournament at Suburban, Sunday, September 10. The affair will be two-ball foursomes, alternate drives and alternate shots, with the sons driving on the odd holes and the fathers on the even. The low gross team will be State champion, while net prizes also will be awarded. Entries close Friday, September 8, at the association office in Baltimore.

Dr. W. C. Barr, secretary of the District Golf Association, is completing plans for the District amateur championship, September 20, 21 and 22 at Burning Tree, and the mixed Scotch foursome play Wednesday, September 27, at Kenwood.

May Highlight Season

With Roger Peacock and Bobby Brownell prospective entries, as well as defending champion Johnny Burke, Georgetown's former Intercollegiate champion from Newport, R. I., the tourney may be the highlight of the season. Entries close Monday, September 18 at 6 p. m., and are limited to amateurs with handicaps of 14 and under. The fee is $3.00.

The District Women's Golf Association's fall card opens September 12 with the Corby Cup at Columbia, that includes the President's Plate at Columbia and The Washington Post Tournament, at medal play for the first time, October 3 at Chevy Chase.

At least 20 of the local women golfers, headed by Marion Brown and Mrs. Betty Meckley, will get an early start next week in the annual Mason-Dixon championship at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. The best field in several years is expected.

Meanwhile the week-end golfers will have their biggest programs of the season the coming Labor Day week-end, with a full card at every club, and from September 11 to 16 the eyes of the local fans will turn toward Chicago to watch Bobby Brownell's efforts in the National Amateur Championship, where the consensus is that the Suburban Invitation Champion is going to spring a surprise.

Alice Marble Advances at Essex

By the Associated Press

Manchester, Mass., Aug. 30.—Rain and wind were ignored by Alice Marble today when that national and British champion led six other stars into the quarter-finals of the Essex Country Club women's tennis tourney.

The only players frustrated by the inclement weather were Valerie Scott, the British Wightman Cup player, and Katherine Winthrop, of Manchester, whose late engagement for the last of the eight brackets was put over until tomorrow.

Miss Marble eliminated one of her Wightman Cup team-mates, Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—3, while heading the advance. It was not made without an upset, however, for fourth seeded Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., bowed before Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, 6—3, 6—3.

Two British girls kept pace with the international titlist, Mrs. Freda James Hammersley and Nina Brown, and the other two victors were Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Virginia Walfenden, of San Francisco.

Miss Brown, after drawing a bye and a second round default, outsteadied the high ranking Mrs. Virginia Rice Johson, of Boston, for a 6—3, 2—6, 6—2 win. Mrs. Hammersley eliminated Marilyn McCrae, of Little Rock, Ark., 6—4, 6—0. Miss Scott had the most difficult assignment of the day in eliminating the stubborn Hope Knowles, of Philadelphia, 7—5, 11—9, after the latter had 10 set points during their early second-round match.

At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

Doctor's Nurse, A. Kirk Aboard, Wins Marlboro Feature

Mamie's Lad Second by 1½ Lengths

Third Purse of Year For Winner; Pays $14.60; Daily Double Pays Backers $64.30

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 30.—Mrs. C. B. Inscoe's Doctor's Nurse made a front-running tour of the half-mile oval here today to win the Crain Highway Purse, feature event on the program. Apprentice Jockey Arson Kirk put the daughter of Dr. Freeland, one-time Preakness winner, into high gear at the start and she won by a length and a half margin from Mrs. G. C. Everhart's Mamie's Lad. Women owners dominated the money positions when Mrs. M. Sensenich's Satin Royce gained the show position.

Doctor's Nurse, in winning her third purse of the year in 18 starts, had only a scattered backing in the crowd of 5,000 and rewarded those with tote ticket No. 1 to the extent of a $14.60 mutuel. She was clocked in 1:27 4-5 for the 6½ furlongs. Eight rollicking juveniles marched postward.

After Mamie's Lad and Canwyn had drawn most of the heavy money in t ehmachines, Doctor's Nurse broke on top, to be followed by Satin Royce, Cnawyn and Grand Waltz. Mamie's Lad was well backed, but Jockey Machado saved ground along the rail. Doctor's Nurse drew out on Satin Royce. Entering the stretch, Machado toook Mamie's Lad out for racing room. The colt gained ground steadily to the end but Doctor's Nurse held on with good courage.

J. E. Simmons' Remolee, bred by Alan Clarke, bounced out of the maiden ranks in the first race under a good ride by Jockey Sammy Palumbo. The daughter of Mowlee withstood repeated challenges of Bet Wick in the late stages after racing Bonnie Hampton into defeat to get to the front. Romolee paid an $11 mutuel and started the ball rolling on a $64.30 payoff in the daily double.

J. R. Howell's Quick Vine was a neck winner over Trout Stream in the second race, which completed the daily double transaction. Apprentice R. Bernhardt was aboard the winner, which paid $9.10. Pretty Pal was third in the field of eight.

Hamilton Playground Beats Roosevelt, 3-0

Behind the two-hit pitching of Walter Long, who struck out 14 men, Hamilton Playground yesterday defeated Roosevelt, 3-0, on the latters' diamond in the city-wide playground tourney.

War Regalia Wins Saratoga Handicap

Don Meade Rides Winner; Flying Lee Second by Length

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 30. War Regalia, 3-year-old daughter of Man o' War—Regal Lady, which had earned only $200 in three previous races this year, gained prominence here this afternoon when she won the initial running of the mile and a furlong Diana Handicap, a new fixture for fillies and mares that attracted 11 members of the weaker sex to the post. With Don Meade up, the Mrs. W. M. Jeffords color bearer, coupled with Solar Flight and quoted at 9 to 2, led all the way and registered by a length and a half in 1:52 1-5. Her share of the purse was $2,550.

Flying Lee Second

H. P. Headley's Flying Lee was an easy second, five lengths in front of W. V. McGrath's Chilean mare, Shangay Lily. Mrs. H. C. Phipp's' Hostility, an entry with Despondent and Wise Lady and favorite at 13 to 5, lost the show by four lengths. Shangay Lily and Hostility were equal topweights by the scale.

A few days ago, in a class C Handicap, War Regalia was nosed out by Pixey Dell. Flying Lee also was beaten in that affair.

For the third time in her four starts this season, all of which came at this track, the fractious War Regalia was placed on the outside of the stalls. George Cassidy finally sent the field away to a good start.

Never Falters

Don Meade, who after this race trailed the pacemaking Johnny Longden by one in the matter of winners ridden at the meeting—the score stood 19 to 18—lost no time making use of his mount's speed. War Regalia opened up five lengths entering the back stretch and never faltered thereafter, winning well in hand. Solar Flight raced closest to her stablemate until Flying Lee put her away turning for home. Shangay Lily and Hostility, as usual, had to come from many lengths out of it.

Meade drew even with Longden by riding the winner of the following race.

Plans Complete For Warrenton Horse Show

Championship for 3-Year-Olds Bred In Va. to Feature Card

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 30.—Plans were completed today for the fortieth annual Warrenton Horse Show, to be held September 2 and 4, according to J. North Fletcher, president of the association.

Featured on the card is the championship for 3-year-olds bred in Virginia, which is bringing out the cream of the Old Dominion's young stock. Entrants are required to have won a first or second ribbon in any show on the Virginia circuit this season, and will be shown at a walk, trot and canter and over four 3½-foot fences.

The valuable silver plate which will be given the champion youngster will be presented by District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen. The trophy was donated by Manley Carter, Morris Clark, Mrs. D. N. Lee, Ernest Redmon, Mrs. Mary Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, J. North Fletcher, Alex Calvert, Dr. Lewis M. Allen, Miss Julia Shearer, Mrs. Marion duPont Scott, Christopher M. Greear, jr., Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, and Mr. and Mrs. Melville Church 3d.

District of Columbia exhibitors include Betty Couzens, who is showing Repulsion and a newcomer to shows, Sumouse; Fred Hughes, jr., with his Black Caddy; Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, recently recovered from a throat infection; Richard Hutchison's Keel Haul, a well-mannered hunter who made his initial ring appearance at the recent Berryville show, and Fenton Fadeley, with Headrock and Skippy.

From Greenwich, Conn., comes Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Untermyer's show stable which won the hunter championship here last year with Hexamenter. This time Manager Charles Lewis has brought down a 4-year-old, Illuminator, and two 3-year-olds, which are unfortunately not eligible for the tricolor in their division because they have not been shown on the Virginia circuit.

Jean Tenny Defends Title In Archery

National Champion In '37 and '38 Enters Old Dominion Meet

By the Associated Press

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 30.—Petite Jean Tenny, of Clearspring, national women's archery champion in 1937 and 1938, will defend her Old Dominion Archery Association title here Sunday and Monday at the association's annual tournament.

Miss Tenney, who lost her national crown this year, is expected to face stiff opposition in the sectional tourney from Miss Lucy Deloss, of Washington, winner of the 1938 Eastern women's championship and ranking marksman of the Potomac archers.

Mrs. Viola Miller, of Baltimore's Oriole archers, also may furnish a fight for the two champions.

Margaret Bohrer, of the local Antietam archers, is the first-ranking woman shot on the host club.

In the men's division, William H. Clark, jr., champion of the Oriole archers, will be opposed by Earl Widmyer, of the Antietam archers.

Silver cups and bronze medals will be awarded in both divisions. Perpetual trophies may be won only by association members and are not offered in open competition.

In addition to the Hagerstown, Baltimore and Washington contestants, entries are expected from York, Harrisburg and other adjacent Pennsylvania cities.

Competition will begin Sunday morning, with afternoon shooting, a banquet and business session rounding out the day, and will continue through Monday.

Richmond, Aug. 30 (AP).—J. Francis Donaldson, racing secretary for Monday's Labor Day horse races at the State Fair grounds, said today the restoration of horse racing to the Labor Day program after an absence of 16 years had created great interest in racing circles.

Donaldson said horses would be entered from Harrisonburg, Petersburg, Culpeper, Berryville, Fredericksburg and Washington.

Virginia U. Grid Squad Opens Camp Today

Coaching Staff to Meet Norfolk Naval Base Potential Footballers at

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Aug. 30.—The University of Virginia football coaching staff, headed by Frank Murray, will leave tomorrow to meet early arrivals at their Norfolk Naval Base training camp.

A majority of the 50 squad members are expected to report by tomorrow night and secure uniforms Friday morning for the first workout. Full strength probably will be reached by the end of the week.

The camp roster lists about 30 holdovers from last year's squad, including 18 lettermen covering all positions. In spite of the large quota of veteran material, however, several members of the sophomore class are considered excellent first-team prospects.

U. S. Davis Cup Team 'Loaned' To Australians

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—Elwood T. Cooke, who cut quite a figure in the all-English championships at Wimbledon, is going to help tune up Australia's big four for the Davis Cup challenge round against the United States here this week-end.

Cooke, No. 7 in the United States tennis rankings, was "loaned" to the Aussies for practice as a gesture of friendship betwen Capt. Walter L. Pate, of the United States, and Capt. Harry Hopman, of Australia.

The new assignment for Cooke will in no way affect the status of Fred Perry, former English Davis Cup hero, as Australia's practice player. Perry was scheduled to arrive today for workouts.

Meanwhile, the second day of rain forced both the American and Australian players to seek indoor courts for practice.

The Australians—including John Bromwich, Adrian K. Quist and Jack Crawford—held a morning workout, while the Americans—Riggs, Frank Parker, Joe Hunt and Jack Kramer—chose the afternoon for practice.

Sholl's Girls Rout Aggies Ten by 16-1

Dot Keady Allows Two Hits, but Mates' Batting Features

Sixteen hits, eight for extra bases, gave Sholl's girls' softball ten its second consecutive triumph over Department of Agriculture yesterday at Eastern High Stadium, 16-1, and locked up the third straight city-wide championship for the cafe lassies.

Dot Keady checked in a two-hit performance in six innings, but her efforts were shadowed by the heavy bombardment of her mates at the plate. Shortfielder Ana Liegus slammed a homer into centerfield in the fourth, and another round-trip clout was made by Catcher Betty Woods in the fifth. Three triples, two by "Pugy" Herbert, as well as three doubles, were included.

The cafeteria girls, first at the plate, registered four runs in the initial inning that convincingly settled things. The Aggies managed for players in scoring position several times, but lacked the punch to put them over. Their only tally was in the fifth, when Sholls Keady hit a wild streak and walked four opponents, Catcher Last being forced across the plate.

Pro Giants Beat All-Stars, 9-0

Osmanski lugged the ball 6 yards through the line on another gain, but when Luckman's pass was knocked down by Cuff, the Collegians were forced to punt.

From their own 20-yard line the pros immediately launched another goalward drive, which carried through the end of the first quarter and was resumed in the second period.

Tuffy Leemans, back on the scene of his triumphs as a collegian in 1936, was sent into the Giants backfield and his first gesture was a 30-yard romp across right tackle. He veered to the side lines and minced-stepped 30 yards before Faust hauled him down at midfield. Leemans shot a pass to Walls for 15 yards and then he smashed tackle for 9 more.

Ken Strong Boots Goal

When an offside penalty set the Giant back, Coach Steve Owen moved Ken Strong into his backfield, and from the 22-yard line Strong placed-kicked a field goal to improve the Giants' lead to 6-0, with 10 minutes of the half remaining.

In the later minutes of the half the Collegians made their best bid for a touchdown, with Holy Cross' Osmanski and Michigan State's Pingel carrying the burden. Osmanski broke center for gains of 7 and 15 yards, and Pingel flipped a 7-yard pass to Faust, but the drive ended on the Giants' 34-yard line when Lunday, rookie Giant, intercepted one of Pingel's passes.

Davey O'Brien was sent into the game with 2 minutes of the half remaining, but he uncorked only one pass, which Oklahoma's Young fumbled after being in the clear at midfield.

O'Brien put his team in jeopardy at the opening of the second half when he threw a flat pass that was intercepted behind the line of scrimmage by Poole, tall Giant end. The Giants reached the Collegian's 13-yard line before O'Brien stopped the drive by intercepting a Danowski pass.

Cuff Misses Score

The Giants suddenly went conservative at the tag end of a 52-yard drive goalward in which Danowski passed to Cuff and Poole, for sizable gains and Karcis bulled his way around left end for 10 yards. The Giants had a first down on the Collegians' 9-yard line, but when three line attempts netted only 8 yards, they elected to try a field goal. Cuff, from the 9-yard line, was wide with his boot.

Tuffy Leemans set a new march in motion for the Giants when he returned Patterson's punt 15 yards to the Collegians 41 at the outset of the fourth quarter. The George Washington graduate moved around end for 7 yards on the next play, and added two more on a third consecutive run, but when a third-down pass failed, Strong upped the Giants' margin to 9 to 0 with a 41-yard placement.

Stars Take to Air

The Collegians, with Billy Patterson, of Baylor, supplanting O'Brien and Luckman as their passer, launched two aerial attacks before the finish of the game. Passes from Patterson to Oklahoma's Young moved the ball 20 yards on one occasion and 11 yards on another, but the attack was halted temporarily when Tarzen White smothered Osmanski for an 8-yard loss on a running attempt. It was checked completely when big Len Barnum intercepted a long pass by Patterson on the Giants' 11-yard line.

The final two minutes brought another furious scoring attempt by the Collegians. Bottari and Patterson alternated with passes to Faust and moved the ball into Giants' territory. Luckman unleased a 20-yard throw to Wimple that placed the ball on the Giants' 22, but it was a dying gesture. Luckman's next pass was intercepted by Oldershaw, rookie Giant guard, as the timekeeper's gun boomed with finality.

beaten pitcher before he was thoroughly warmed up. The White Sox leaped on him for three runs in the first inning. But from that point, Rookie Haynes was considerably improved. From the first until the seventh inning, he didn't permit a Chicagoan to reach base and he threw six consecutive scoreless innings at the Sox before he clinched the game with a two-run uprising in the eighth.

Hayes, Kuhl Start It

The first four men to face Haynes slugged out hits. Hayes and Kuhl commenced the first inning with singles and Kreevich produced two runs with a two-bagger against the leftfield wall. Appling produced the third with a single to right. In the eighth, singles by Hayes, Kuhel and Appling accounted for two more runs.

The Nats were a punchless outfit against Lyons. One of their two runs was a gift affair, spawning from Hayes' muff of Wright's grounder with two out in the fourth. Then Cecil Travis bumped a two-bagger to left center for the Nats' first hit of the game and Bloodworth beat out a single to McNair that scored Wright from third.

At one ponit, in the sixth inning, the Nats cut the Sox lead to 3-2, with the aid of a double steal. After Lewis opened the inning with a single to right and West followed with a walk, Wright popped out and then Lewis and West negotiated their twin steal. Lewis was thus in a position to score on Travis' infield out, which he did.

Dykes Banished

Manager Jimmy Dykes was banished from the game by Umpire Ormsby in the eighth inning when he vociferously protested that Buddy Lewis made no attempt to get out of the way of a pitched ball that flicked his uniform. Dykes superintended the rest of the day's play from a seat in the stands near the Chicago bullpen.

Krakauskas was the pitcher of the hour in that second game in which his opponent at the outset was Jack Knott. The Lithuanian walked only three batters and was breaking a fast ball over the plate with damaging consistency. He showed none of the tendency to weaken in the later stages which has characterized his recent efforts, and only one of the three Chicago runs off him was untainted.

The Nats didn't waste much time in the second game, wringing two runs out of Knott in the first inning. They filled the bases with none out on singles by Case and Lewis and a walk to West. Wright's long fly moved Case home and Lewis to third, whence he scored on Travis' infield out.

Bloodworth Paves Way

Jackie Hayes' double retrieved a run for the White Sox in the third but Jimmy Bloodworth paved the way for another Washington run when he opened the fourth with a double to the leftfield corner. Vernon sacrificed him to third and Giuliani's fly to Kreevich brought him home.

Thereafter it was a tight duel between Krakky and Knott, with Jimmy Blodoworth saving Krakky from embarrassment on three occasions with a series of sensational fielding plays around second base. But in the eighth, after the Nats had muffed scoring opportunities of their own, the White Sox suddenly tied the score at 3 to 3.

Kreevich walked with one out, and for no sound reason. Appling sacrificed. Gerald Walker supplied a two-bagger to right that scored Kreevich, and then ensued a queer sort of business. Rosenthal drove a hard grounder to Vernon, who fumbled the ball and then, recovering, tossed to Krakauskas, who was covering first. Krakky dropped the throw and Walker galloped all the way home with the run that tied the score.

The Sox intrusted the 3-to-3 tie to Clint Brown, and then it was that Buddy Myer put in his appearance.

Race Commission Now Under Budget

Baltimore, Aug. 30 (AP).—A bill enacted to modernize Maryland's governmental business practice will bring the state racing commission under the budget for the first time in 19 years, Attorney General William C. Walsh ruled today.

The bill provides that each department or agency receiving a lump sum appropriation must notify the Governor within 90 days after the legislature adjourns how it plans to spend the money. Walsh said $30,000 was appropriated for the commission when it was formed in 1920 and that it had continued to operate under this one bill ever since.

Jervis Spencer, jr., chairman of the board, said it would be difficult for it to submit an estimate of expenditures because the commission could not know how much it would need for legal expenses nor how much it would cost to operate the State fair board.

Patient Driving Urged For Holiday Week-End

Baltimore, Aug. 30 (AP).—The mounting toll of Maryland automobile fatalities this month drew from the State police accident prevention bureau today a plea that motorists take a "generous supply of patience" along with them over Labor Day week-end.

"Impatient driving, caused by congested highways, is largely responsible for the excessive number of fatal accidents which have come to be expected as a traffic aftermath of Labor Day," the bureau said.

Nor'easter Abates In Delaware; Wind Reaches 42 Miles

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 30 (AP).—A two-day northeast storm—the worst of the season—abated in lower Delaware today.

At least 25 vessels, however, remained at safe anchorage inside the Delaware breakwaters as the Coast Guard kept a lookout for a possible recurrence of the howling winds.

Highways in some sections were covered by three to four inches of water, although all roads were open.

The storm reached its peak last night, when the wind attained a velocity of 42 miles an hour. Fishermen said serious damage along the Rehoboth Beach coastline was prevented by a sudden shift in the wind just before high tide.

Winds tore down corn in some sections. Farmers in the Georgetown section feared heavy loss would result to tomato crops. Flooded fields, they said, are preventing them from harvesting.

Montgomery Finds Return Of Confidence

Acacia President, Back From West Coast, Sees General Improvement

Universal evidence of returning confidence, quite in contrast with his observations upon a similar trip last year, was reported yesterday by William Montgomery, president of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., who has just returned from the west coast. During the six weeks he was absent from Washington Mr. Montgomery not only gathered information about conditions from the agents of his own company but also talked with many leaders of banking, industry and business. Virtually all, he said, agree that the economic outlook is most encouraging.

"I was particularly impressed," said Mr. Montgomery, "with the proportions a definite building program, independent of governmental assistance, has assumed. It was apparent in all the cities I visited. A particular instance was Portland, Ore., where labor troubles have been settled to a large extent and there is such a marked improvement in the building industry.

Real Estate Market

"Another significant change from last year is found in the market for distressed real estate. Foreclosed real estate is being sold much more rapidly, proving that people generally are confident of the future.

"I found general approval of the action of Congress on important legislation."

On the moot question of the availability of banking loans for business enterprise, Mr. Montgomery declared that his contacts with officials of banks, trust companies and mortgage loan appraisers in all the large cities he visited convinced him that "anyone with reasonable security, moral or physical, can get all the credit he needs."

Acacia Convention

On the first stage of his transcontinental journey, Mr. Montgomery attended a national convention of the William Montgomery Quality Club, composed of outstanding representatives of Acacia, at Sun Valley, Idaho, which he pronounced "the most beautiful spot of its kind I have ever seen." There were 253 members present from all over the country—30 from the District of Columbia branch—and animated by the record business they are piling up the participants in the convention agreed that public confidence is definitely returning. Accordingly, Mr. Montgomery said, the meeting was the most enthusiastic the organization has yet held.

Typical of the reports made was that from Washington, where a record of $2,321,000 of placed business marked the first six months of this year, a large gain over last year, with steady improvement continuing.

"The Nation, of course, still faces many grave problems," Mr. Montgomery concluded, "but the observations I made on this trip convince me that the people at large are far more certain now than a year ago that they will be satisfactorily solved."

Washington Gas Halves Loss for July

Month's Net Deficit Is $27,943 Against $58,431 a Year Ago

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co., filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission shows operating revenues of $463,891 for July compared with $448,228 for July a year ago, an increase of $15,663 as a result of the larger volume of gas sold. Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectible bills, amounted to $431,324 this July compared with $426,347 for July 1938, an increase of $4,997. These figures result in a net operating revenue of $32,567, or $10,686 more than for the same month last year.

Non-operating revenues increased $9,436 to $9,579 this July. Interest and amortization were $70,089 in July this year compared with $80,365 for July, 1938, a decrease effected by the bond refinancing last November. The final balance for the month was a seasonal deficit of $27,943 compared with a loss in July a year ago of $58,341, or an improvement of $30,398. The net income for the first seven months ended July 31, 1939 amounted to $881,419 compared with $670,738 for the same period last year, an increase of $210,681.

The company reports gas sales of 626,781 mcf or an increase of 31,687 mcf over July a year ago. There were 154,197 meters in service on July 31, 1939 compared with 148,550 on the same date last year, a gain of 5,647 meters.

The report also shows that substantial expenditures are being currently made for extensions to property. The company expended approximately $80,000 in improvements to property for the service to customers for the month of July and over $529,000 during the first seven months of the current year.

In the case of the Roanoke and Silver Spring companies, dividend payments will amount to 7 per cent on preferred stock and 10 per cent a share on common. The Hagerstown bank will pay its stockholders 7 per cent on preferred, 10 cents a share on class B common, and $1.60 on class A common stock.

U. S. Rubber Co. Considers Plant In Argentina

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—The $170,000,000 United States Rubber Co. has been making a study of trade possibilities in Argentina, with the view of possibly erecting a new plant there, it was learned today.

Charles Stewart, engineer, and Arnold Van Pelt, assistant to the vice president, have been making an extensive survey of the South American field. They are expected to return to this country from Buenos Aires around the middle of next month. The rubber company's plans for manufacturing rubber products below the Equator will depend largely on the report they bring back.

Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. already have South American plants, and the field for sales of rubber goods there is expanding, trade observers say. Owning of rubber manufacturing plants in Argentina is advantageous, executives point out, because of Argentine import restrictions on rubber goods.

Should United States Rubber decide to build a South American plant, it would be used for the manufacture of shoes, tires, and possibly other products for the South American trade.

Associated Gas Output

Gross output, included sales to other utilities, amounted to 103,166,802 units for the current week.

Prices Work Lower in Hesitant Market Brokers at Sea on Foreign Events Bonds Make Better Performance

New York, Aug. 30.—This is the time when all good men will seek the aid of the ouija board in shaping their investment policies rather than depending upon such outworn methods of reasoning supplied heretofore by their brains, business indices and a few figures on money rates. The latter were all right in their day but they don't cut much of a figure now and the job of recording the wayward ways of Wall Street in this new era of international politics is like sitting in on a reincarnated shell game.

The innocents of Broad and Wall are out of their depth in this particular type of setup and the extremely dull trading on the Stock Exchange is the evidence that they are sitting, a bit uncomfortably, on the sidelines waiting to see which way to jump. Such decisions as are made are based on the news from abroad rather than on the daily run of information regarding what companies are earning, what they will pay in dividends and what they may expect in the future.

Delay Hurts Business

One of the major troubles with this waiting attitude is that it spreads to business as well as into the market place. It makes very little difference to us ordinary folks just who happens to be holding the outstanding share capitalization of steel and motors and telephone, but it makes a lot of difference to us if these and other companies hold back on expenditures, cancel expansion plans, cut their pay rolls or do any number of other things which sane people are bound to do if they can't see beyond the clouds that loom immediately ahead.

Business as a whole has been doing well; the Herald-Tribune's index, published weekly, has just gone to a new high for the current move. But is a certainty the present upward trend cannot be continued if the world is to be continually stood on end by fear and suspicion and the expectation of universal calamity.

Pessimism Increases

When business started this morning in Wall street it happened that news from abroad was more reassuring and the opening of the stock market was higher. Pessimism grew as the day progressed, however, and the market averaged off one-quarter point at the close. Only 496,420 shares changed hands on the big board, which shows that the pressure of liquidation is not great.

Not all the dispatches from abroad which led to the later selling can be classed as news, for some of them were strictly of the rumor variety. The major one was to the effect that there would be an important radio broadcast from Berlin at 11 p. m. or 6 p. m., New York time. This report was credited sufficiently to cause the news ticker to stay open until that time and to give the street another case of jitters. Actually it wasn't true, and the misunderstanding was explained as having been caused by confusion with a broadcast to be made on the food situation by Germany's minister of economics. All of wihch goes to prove that the market place and the world at large are feeling the effects of the war of nerves.

The Street can do little but sit and wait under such conditions. It isn't even paying any special attention to the so-called war stocks in the present situation. For several days the most active stock on the big board has been Loft, which is concerned with candy and a soft drink rather than fire and brimstone.

Oil shares were stubborn on the late decline today, their resistance growing out of the settlement of the crude oil price dispute in Texas. Steels and motors were active with fractional declines predominating. Metals were soft, despite the more spirited buying of copper, and the aviations, which are vitally tied to the world-wide race for armaments, sold off with the balance of the list.

Midweek trade news showed that power production is holding near its peak but off 0.6 per cent from the all-time high set in the preceding week. It is 10.3 per cent above the figure for the same week last year. The Iron Age, weekly review of the steel industry, noted that August bookings continue to show gains of 2 to 10 per cent above July despite the threatening situation abroad.

Bond Market Improves

Listed bonds closed irregularly higher today after a session of rapid upward and downward swings occasioned by the varying reports from Europe. The opening was favorable, but the initial gains were modified as reports became ever more pessimistic. The war pivot still remained the only one on which the market for senior securities moves. Trading amounted only to $3,760,000, for most interests preferred the sidelines.

Active issues of United States Treasury securities showed small fractional advances to the closing gong on the big board, but the gains were wiped out almost entirely in the late counter dealings. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were similarly quiet and irregular. Best rated utility, railroad and corporation bonds were better, where changed, but only because the news was more favorable before 3 p. m. than after that hour.

South Africa to Skim Cream Off Gold Sales

Capetown, South Africa, Aug. 30 (AP).—The South African government today announced it would sponsor legislation in the next session of Parliament to supplement the present mining taxation by appropriating all of the proceeds of the sale of gold above 150 shillings an ounce (currently about $330. Gold was quoted in London today at 158 shillings sixpence.

The government also announced that its currency, which now roughly corresponds to the British pound, still would be linked with sterling.

Wheat Rallies After Earlier Half-Cent Drop

Closing Prices Are Unchanged to ⅝ Above Tuesday

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Wheat futures stepped again to the tune of European political news today and after losing about ½ cent a bushel reacted to close unchanged to ⅝ net higher.

Scattered commission-house buying, local short covering, strength at Winnipeg and less favorable construction placed on late news from abroad at one time lifted prices ¼-1¼ cent above the previous close. Offerings, however, increased on the upturn, and best prices were not maintained.

September and December contracts were up ⅛ cent at 67¾ and 68½, and May was up 1¼ at 69. September closed at 67¼@67½, December 67⅝@67¼ and May 68¼@68.

Other grains generally followed wheat. Corn finished unchanged to ⅛ up, September 43¾@43¾, December 43¼@44; oats ⅛ off to ¼ up; soybeans unchanged to ⅛ up; rye ¼-⅜ off; lard 3 to 5 cents a hundredweight lower.

Cotton Futures Slip Lower in Narrow Range

New York, Aug 30 (AP).—The cotton futures market didn't like much the late news from abroad today. Although no one foreign development was credited with the decline, small morning gains were converted into final losses of 5 to 9 points. Foreign and local selling coincided with small declines in security prices and erratic trends in the Chicago wheat pit. Last prices were the day's lowest.

Many traders noted, however, that new buying appeared to reach the ring whenever prices declined to a level where a loan might become mandatory on the new crop. The weekly Government weather summary, less favorable than expected, proved a base for a short-lived rally.

Worth Street reported another lackadaisical trade. Prices stood less in the way of buyers, commission men said, than events abroad.

Boston Wool

Boston, Aug. 30 (AP). (U. S. Dept. of Agr.). A few buyers were in the market today for moderate quantities of wool for urgent immediate requirements. They showed no interest, however, in anticipating future needs. Original-bag fine territory wool was sold at 67 to 68 cents, scoured basis, for good French combing length, and 64 to 66 cents, scoured basis, for average to short French combing length. Graded combing, half blood, bright fleece wool was sold at a price within the range 29 to 31 cents, in the grease. Inquiries were received for quarter blood, combing bright fleece wools, but buyers were not willing to pay the prices asked.

Securities Make Brisk Recovery In London Trading

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 30.—London stock markets, virtually at a standstill for the past five days under government restrictions to conserve British financial resources, recorded a sharp recovery today in government securities, as dealers took a cautiously optimistic view of the European situation.

The 3½ per cent war loan, "telltale" of government securities, rose 1¾ points on the day to 90¾, and 2½ per cent consols marked the largest rise at 66, 2 points above the overnight close. The turnover, however, remained only a fraction of the normal volume.

Improved sentiment also was indicated by a noticeable fall in pressure against the pound. The dollar closed at 4.41½ to the pound against 4.36 yesterday. Another sign of improved sentiment was found in the three months forward dollar premium falling to 3½ cents against 4 cents yesterday.

The gold price was fixed at 158 shillings sixpence per fine ounce, an increase of 1 shilling sixpence from yesterday's price.

Permission to sell British-held United States stocks in New York may be obtained from the Treasury, despite the Government ban on the transfer of foreign stocks.

Eggs, 16 Cents, Hit All-Time August Low

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Refrigerator eggs for October delivery hit an all-time low of 16 cents a dozen on the mercantile exchange today under general liquidation and stop-loss selling. The low point was a fall of .75 of a cent but the market rallied and closed .30 of a cent lower at 16.45.

Brokers said the selling was inspired by disappointing use of storage reserves in major markets, and fear of heavy fall production throughout the East, heightened by reports that eastern collections last week were 3% per cent higher than the same week in 1938.

Steel Activity At Peak Point For 22 Months

War or Not, Producers Believe Demand Upon Mills Will Increase

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 30.—Further increases in the rate of steel perduction were seen as likely today by Iron Age magazine.

"The steed industry this week," the publication said, "finds ingot production rising a half point to a new 22-month peak of 63½ per cent in a market reflecting a further small increase in domestic steel orders, but complicated by threats of an impending European war.

"While producers believe that within a few months after actual breaking out of general war the demand on American mills for all kinds of steel products would be intense, likewise an early settlement of Europe's present crisis would increase demand from consumers at home who may become hesitant if war uncertainty continues."

The Iron Age composite scrap price advanced 16 cents to $18.62 a ton and the magazine's index of capital goods activity rose to 63.2 from 63.2 with increases in automotive steel releases.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

W. Howard "Buffalo Bill" Woolworth, in an open letter to Dr. E. B. Connolly, of Washington, describes today's hand, in which ridiculous bidding by East and West was awarded high score. An outlandish first hand psychic caught a lucky fit with partner and a double from the opponents to win game.

"Buffalo Bill" writes to his Washington friend, describing the bidding and play of the hand, as follows:

"Dear Doc: Please add this cuckoo hand to the agenda for the next bridge-bug meeting at the National Press Club, the Washington Bridge League or wherever the post-mortemists gather.

"It was board 22 of the Cedar Point, Ohio, team-of-four championship.

"West declared to bid a club, as East had made, on the preceding hand, the spectacular discard of a diamond ace, defending three no trump, in order to avoid a nonexistent end play dropping two tricks. Previously he had also made an opening lead of a doubleton of one of his opponent's bid suits, putting two more tricks under the hammer. At this point, West was firmly convinced that the art of timing had been legislated out of existence in the State of Ohio.

"One no trump: Just a bid in turn.

"Three clubs: Christopher Columbus took a chance, too. East must pass here.

"Redouble: The desperate gasp of a drowning bridge bug attempting to get off the hook.

"It wheeled right in, redoubled! North cashed the diamond king and ace, the heart ace and pushed a small spade at the declarer, who had decided to finesse South for the spade queen, which would have collected a zero colder than Rameses' sister's cat's grandmother. O Sole Mio!"

Four hearts or five diamonds can be made by North-South though apparently none of the pairs bid game.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

New planks for the legislative program of the American Federation of Government Employes, as formulated by lodges in the District for presentation to the national convention at Atlantic City, were announced yesterday.

Officials said the local lodges, after studying legislative changes proposed in Washington and other lodges, had reached nearly unanimous agreement on legislative policy, with the proviso that national officers should be given leeway to deal with the legislative situation as it develops.

The new planks to be supported by District lodges include:

Retirement: In optional retirement legislation the District lodges will oppose giving the Government an "option," on the ground that it might become a method for ousting employes who should be retained in service.

Grievances: Local lodges will urge that any appeals board set up to redress grievances in the Government service be given authority to enforce its decisions.

Dismissals: The delegates will oppose any economy program "designed to cause dismissals or reduce pay of government employes."

Unemployment: The District lodges will seek unemployment benefits for all Government workers who are involuntarily separated from the service, except for misconduct.

Civil service: The delegates will urge increased funds for the Civil Service Commission; inclusion of experience as an equivalent for educational requirements in civil service examinations; appointment of postmasters without Senate confirmation, on the same basis as other civil service employes.

In addition the local lodges have indorsed the following items in last year's legislative program: $1,500 minimum annual pay in the Government service, with automatic promotions; five-day 35-hour week without decrease in pay; extension of the merit system; extension of classification to field employes who desire it; 30-year optional retirement, and unqualified disability retirement at age 60; higher pay for night work; prevailing wage for craft employes where there is no wage-fixing machinery; consideration of length of service, experience and general fitness in promotion policy; civil service board of appeals, so organized as to protect the rights of employes; shorter hours and better pay in the Veterans' Administration; better pay and working conditions in the custodial service; and shorter hours and better working conditions in the Prison Service.

How to count the heads of the Nation's trailer population is something that has the Census Bureau temporarily stumped. The best suggestion to date about how it could be done, according to Dr. Vergil D. Reed, assistant bureau director, was sent in by a Californian.

"He suggested having a special trailer sticker made that would be stuck on anywhere the census taker happened to overtake a trailer family," Dr. Reed said.

Three movies, "The River," "In the Wake of the Buccaneers," and the "Old Danish Sugar Bowl," are included in a "naturalist program" to be presented by the office of National Capital Parks in Fort Bunker Hill Park, Fourteenth and Perry streets northeast, at 8 p. m. today.

Humidity to Give Workers Holiday In Baltimore

The Baltimore accounting office of the Social Security Board is about to outfancy the Washington Federal chiefs in the matter of when to let employes go home because of the heat.

The very simple practice in Washington of letting employes leave many of the nonair-cooled Government offices when the temperature touches 94 and above would seem to the Baltimore SSB a very haphazard procedure.

Instead, it seeks to correlate temperature and moisture in the atmosphere and arrive at a ratio of the two factors as they affect health, comfort and efficiency.

ADRIANA

By George Dyer

A Story of Love and Intrigue in Vineyard Sound

Chapter XIX

"HE looked like a foreigner of some sort."

"As a matter of fact, we're more foreigners than he is. He's one of the Gay Head Indians. I thought I told you."

"I forgot. You did, but not much about him."

"I don't know much, except that he's known as Big Jack and he's a bad lot. Many of the Gay Head Indians are decent people, but that one has been mixed up in all sorts of trouble."

"What kind of trouble?"

"Oh, he's been in jail three or four times, charged with various crimes, but he's always been acquitted, I believe. He's supposed to have stabbed a man once, but when he came to trial the man had disappeared, or gone away, or something, and didn't testify and the case fell down."

"Fun!" I said, thoughtfully, remembering that dark troubled face.

"He says he's of pure Indian blood, and most of his trouble has been with white people. I guess he's built up an attitude of refusing to accept the white occupation of America, and especially the Vineyard. He thinks of it as belonging to his own tribe. Of course, as I understand it, the Vineyard was properly bought, not taken, hundreds of years ago. But the Indians kept some special rights in the township of Gay Head, and when he takes care of the plant of the Sea Reduction Corporation I suppose he feels he's looking out for his own property, in a way."

These facts gave me a new slant of thought, and I looked back toward the property which we also thought was, in a way, ours. The two small figures had stopped on the beach before the buildings, and from the set of their shoulders I could imagine they were looking in the direction of the Adriana as the yawl sailed by. All of a sudden, while I watched, the men started running, the bigger form of Mr. Raskin in the lead, the other following him closely. The movement was so unexpected that I grunted with surprise. The girl turned to watch, too.

At first I couldn't understand why they were in such a hurry to get down the empty beach. Then I realized that their objective was the dinghy, drawn up black above the white line of the surf. While we bowled along past them, now some half mile offshore, they reached the little boat, shoved it off, piled into it, and started to row at top speed for the Patria. We could make out that both men were pulling at the oars, and see the figure of the Patria's crew poke into sight on the deck of the big white motor-sailer where it swung at anchor, showing first the flash of one side and then the other against the dun sand as wind or tide pushed her harder.

ABRUPTLY, an uneasy notion jumped into my head.

"Adriana," I said, waving across the bow at a low smudge on the horizon beyond Gay Head, "is that the fog you said we might have?"

"Yes," she answered.

"How far away is it?"

"It's hard to judge. Ten miles; perhaps 15. Why?"

"Too far," I said, and ducked to peer under the mainsail.

To westward (the open end of the Sound) the horizon was covered by a dark narrow level smear, as if you had dipped a brush in sooty water and stroked it across the joint between sea and sky. This stain gradually thickened over the Elizabeth Island to a low-lying smoke, as greasy-looking as smoke from burning oil. The islands themselves, robbed of the sunlight in which we moved, had a sullen cast, and the more northerly of them were backed by a bank as solid in appearance as a distant mountain range.

Thrust toward us in each Hole between the islands lay a plug of what was obviously not soot, or smoke, or mountain, but fog. Honest fog!

"Which Hole is nearest to us?" I asked.

"Quicks, I should guess," said Adriana, with a calculating glance northward.

"How far it is?"

"About five miles from where we are now."

"Is the Patria faster than the Adriana?"

"Oh, surely, under usual conditions."

"Do you mean that her motor might be misbehaving again, same as yesterday morning?"

"I wouldn't count on that," she said, "if we agree that there was more than meets the eye to the Patria's ramming us. But she's not a speedy boat in any case—she's something of a tub, I mean. And she looked awfully low in the water this morning, as if she had a big load of some kind on board. Do you think they're going to chase us?"

"I don't know," I said, "but if you believe we have a fighting chance of getting into that fog bank in Quicks Hole before they can overtake us, let's not waste time. Come about, or do whatever we should to head for it. I'll explain later."

"We don't need to come about. It's a broad reach across to there on this tack. Ease the sheets," and the girl pulled the tiller toward her. I did as I was told. The wind took the Adriana square on her port side; the amber masts leaned over; the starboard rail disappeared under a white bubble of water rushing along the scuppers toward the stern. There was plenty of wind.

"If you're really thinking we should show them our heels," said Adriana, studying the set of the yawl's sails, "we ought to bend on some more canvas. Your boat is rigged to stand it, and I don't think I racked anything dangerously with that stupid jibe. You have a perfect cloud of kites down in that sail locker; I noticed them the other night."

"I WOULDN'T know which is which," I said, "or what to do with them when I got them on deck."

"That's all right. I can tell you the ones to bring up. Then you can take the tiller and I can do everything except the heavy hoisting. But do you think we should run for Quicks Hole?"

"I do," said I, "because I have an idea that our friend back there has picked up a sudden yen to talk with us and is going to chase us. And I'm in no mood to talk with him until I've had time to figure out what all these new developments mean. If we go in any direction except straight away from him, he'll be able to head us off. If he can kick a little more speed out of his boat than we can out of ours, the shorter the distance we have to run before we can hide in the fog, the less time it gives him to overhaul us. If the Patria is much faster than the Adriana, well, we're out of luck anyway; he can catch us whatever we do. I say we should hang out every rag that we have places to tie to, and run for the nearest fog, which is Quicks Hole."

"All right," she agreed, "but we'd better hurry."

Far astern I could see the Patria's sails were going up, too, from which I judged that Mr. Raskin did not trust his unaided motor.

"Name the ones you want," I said.

"The bags are all plainly tagged," said Adriana, with the excited light springing into her eyes and her lips beginning to curl at the corners. "Bring me up a forestays'l and the one marked mizzen stays'l."

I went down into the cabin and found it already heeled over so that I had to walk with one foot on the side of the starboard berth. The MacGlashan of Rannoch was braced uneasily in the angle formed by the mattress and the leeward side of the hull. He beat his tail on the cushions for me, but I had no time for him.

That quality of unholy delight in his mistress' expression had chilled me during our dash through the northeaster, some 30 hours before, but now, with another wind blowing, I welcomed it as a promise that we would be able to squeeze the last possible fraction of a knot out of the yawl Adriana. And vaguely, while I rooted hurriedly among the bulging bags in the locker, I felt that Mr. Raskin must not be allowed to catch us.

I found the two sails Adriana thought we could handle, heaved them up into the cockpit, pulled them out of the bags, and (under the girl's direction) lugged one into position beside the mainmast. Then she turned the helm over to me, went forward and busied herself for a time with snaps, halliards, and other technical details.

Adriana scrambled aft along the upturned port side of the cabin.

"All right," she said, taking the tiller, "you can haul up the forestays'l. It's in stops. When you get it up two blocks, break it out. Don't trim it too flat. Then come aft and we'll tackle the mizzen."

I crawled forward and blunderingly did as I was told. The freed sail nearly took me into the Sound before I could get it sheeted in.

In a similar collaborative fashion we raised the mizzen staysail, more easily, because the width of the deck put everything inboard. With this addition the Adriana simply took wings and flew. But she did her flying practically on her beam ends, and my concern that we might be overtaken by the men on the Patria was doubled by a growing worry that we might sail the yawl under. There was no great sea running, but waves enough for the Adriana to bury her nose every once in so often, and the blue-and-white bubble was right under the edge of the cockpit coaming all the time.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Wheeler Rejects $50,000 Bid to Defend Leche

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, has rejected an offer of $50,000 to serve as counsel for former Gov. Richard W. Leche and Seymour Weiss, of Louisiana, under Federal indictment, it was learned here yesterday.

A Louisianan known to have contacts in the erstwhile Huey Long machine disclosed that Leche and Weiss had visited Wheeler when he was in a hospital here recently for a minor operation.

Two days before their visit they were preceded by a former member of Congress, who offered Wheeler $25,000 as a fee if he would serve as counsel for Leche and Weiss, it was said. Leche and Weiss were said later to have raised the offer to $50,000.

The Senator was said to have explained that his physician had given him orders not to use his voice for three months in speech-making.
